The Boston Slave Sale
Free Power—Not Yet
Man Needs Hard Labor
The $3 Child

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1921

In Boston, a dozen idle workers, among them soldiers, stripped to the waist to show their muscles, as slaves used to strip, and were put up at public auction. The highest bidder was to get the men and their labor, but there was not a bid. Toward the end of the proceedings a small dog was bid for $6. The failure was not complete.

It is not new. Henry Ward Beecher, to help along Abolition, sold a good-looking young mulatto girl at auction in Plymouth Church. There was good bidding then.

Beecher was a good auctioneer. And in those earlier days there was more excitement about "human liberty, equality," and such things.

The chemists, gathered in a convention far more important to the world than any disarmament conference, are talking of REAL things, harnessing the sun's power, and the energy of our revolving earth. What they TALK of this year, they will DO another year. To harness the sun that men once worshipped will be no more remarkable than harnessing the lightning that men once dreaded.

If we saw microbes living on the rim of a great driving wheel, building little engines on the rim, instead of harnessing the wheel, we'd pity them. We are living on a driving wheel, the earth, and, instead of harnessing that wheel, we build little wind mills to catch the breeze.

The moon is the donkey engine of our earth ship. It puts forth its power in the tides. We might at least harness that force. We live on the sun, since it creates all the food we eat. But, except in making photographs, we utilize none of its vast power, sufficient to provide with energy a million planets like ours.

You could make millions of dollars a year if you could invent a way to recover the petroleum that becomes mixed with water in wells. And you could make hundreds of millions a year if you could find an economical, commercial method of extracting the unlimited supply from shale. But please do not write to this column about it. The chemists daily tell of problems that need solving—fame and fortune in every solution—and all the problems will be solved by somebody, some day.

In New York, twenty-five years ago, at "Old Delmonico's," Twenty-sixth street and Fifth avenue, Nicola Tesla, holding up his diaphragm, said to this writer: "If you could realize the force that holds together the atoms of this glass, it would run any factory in the world for a long time."

That sounded like dreaming. Now, every educated child knows that Tesla was right, and chemists are seeking the method of unchaining that atomic force.

That matter is made of atoms, atoms made of electricity, and those electrons of pure electricity, chemists know and prove. So in an iron bridge or steel rail, there is nothing more substantial than electricity. And what that is we don't know. But we shall know.

How much power has the sun? Plenty. It illuminates and heats all within our solar system. Forty-five years ago John Ericsson, who built the Monitor, calculated that on a strip of earth 8,000 miles long and one mile broad the sun's heat would operate our nine hours every day 22,300,000 solar engines, each of 100 horsepower. More than two thousand million horsepower—which means that some day power will be as free as air.

It would be a bad thing now; men are not ready or fit to be set free from hard labor. They will need its wholesome discipline for centuries longer.

Dr. Charles Avery Doremus, in a learned AND human (rare combination) analysis of the work and discussions of tee chemists, says truly that it would be a calamity for men to know too much too soon. "Man's intellectual development needs for his true advancement the balancing effect of a higher moral state."

He says that in Egypt, where civilization started, because crops were sure, it cost only three dollars to raise a child to maturity. That will interest those who pay an accoucheur $1,000 before they see the baby, and pay out $10,000 more before the child is ten years old.

The child of the rich American costs too much. The spending injures the child, making it feel too important. The $3 Egyptian child is too cheap. Human beings are educated by self-sacrifice and struggle for their children.

Wells Indicted for Killings

MURDERER ARRAIGNED FOR CRIME

Sits Calmly in West Roxbury Court as He Is Charged With Taking Two Lives

Displaying only casual interest in the proceedings, Charles Antoine Wells sat in West Roxbury Court today as he was arraigned for the murder of his divorced wife, Eleanor Anna Wells, and her attorney, A. Louis Altmeyer, on a crowded street car in West Roxbury yesterday.

And, at the same time, the Grand Jury was setting a new record in speedy justice, by indicting him for first degree murder on two counts.

Then, as the news of his indictment was sent to the West Roxbury police, Wells was hustled into a patrol wagon and removed to the Charles street jail, there to await his trial on the charges that mean, if convicted, death in the electric chair at Charlestown.

Working until midnight last night, Inspector James A. Dennessey, in charge of the police homicide squad, had seventeen witnesses on hand when the District Attorney was ready to proceed with the indictment. And for this he was commended by Assistant District Attorney Henry F. Fielding.

In West Roxbury Court Wells' case was continued until next Saturday, but the action of the Grand Jury serves to nullify this proceeding as he will wait in the Charles Street Jail, without bail, until his case is ready for

The submarine was being dismantled at the time of the explosion, which occurred in the engine room from an unknown cause.

ESCAPES FROM INSANE ASYLUM IN BRIDGEWATER

Bridgewater, Sept. 10.—Joseph Thompson, a prisoner in the insane hospital at the State Farm, escaped early today, leaving a dummy in his bed. He cut a hole through a window grating, lowering himself from the fourth floor to the ground with a rope made of bedclothes and then scaled a 20 foot wall with the rope and a hook. Thompson, also known as Joseph Martin, was convicted in Boston of robbing Max Molin, a baker, of $30 in a holdup.

5,000 WEEP AT STORY OF 'SLAVE'

Man Adopts for Life Youth Whose Mother Was Killed as a Nurse in France

Stirred as no throng in Boston has been stirred in years, 5,000 persons wept openly and unashamed on Boston Common today, when John Barton, 20 years old ex-service man, and one of Urbain J. Ledoux' "slaves," broke down on the Parkman Bandstand "block" at mention of his mother, a Red Cross nurse killed in France.

A few moments later the sobbing multitude burst forth in shouts of joy when George F. Dupont of No. 151 Harrison avenue stepped forward and with tears streaming down his face cried brokenly: "I'll adopt him. I'll give him a home for life."

While young Barton wept in gratitude on Ledoux's shoulder, the crowd became almost hysterical, hurled money to the extent of $33 on the platform.

The boy, who served eighteen months in France, attempted to express his thanks, but again broke down and his words were inaudible to all but Ledoux. The latter quoted his as saying that he was extremely grateful but "I'd give anything to have my mother back. It's a mother I want."

Old THROWN ON PLATFORM.

Dupont, as he led young Barton away, said that his wife would try to take the place of the dead mother, and the crowd again burst into tears. Dupont, who is employed by the American Railway Express, has one son of his own.

Henry Jones, a colored war veteran, was "knocked down" to a person whose name was not given out, for a week's board and room, and the throng threw $14 on the platform for him.

Fred Smalley, 34 years old ex-service man, went to Nicholas Poto of No. 134 Oxford street, Cambridge, who promised him employment at $8 a day, with free board and room for at least two weeks.

The next "slave," Harry Carmen, also a war veteran, and a machinist by trade, protested that he wanted no charity, but only work. He said he was a Boston boy, born and raised in this city, where he attended the local schools.

Autioneer C. L. Byrne then appealed to Bostonians to give work to one of their own, but without success. Canio Peroni of No. 440 Hanover street at length announced that he would give Carmen six months' board and room, the only proviso being that the man should seek work each day.

Before Carmen could leave the "block" $10 in money was flung at his feet.

George H. Smith, an Australian, who was wounded three times while fighting at the Dardanelles, and who was also captured by the enemy and held in a prisoner of war camp, is next offered. He speaks English, Spanish, German and Holland-Dutch, but has been unable to find work.

His problem was solved temporarily when a representative of George Klonkinicte, proprietor of the Park restaurant at Nantasket, which has been closed for the season, announced he would take care of Smith and nine others until the first of October at least.

Charles Hudson went to Mrs. Anna Jackson of No. 8 Lynde street, Charlestown, for two weeks and

GIRL DIES, 'FATTY' TO BE GRILLED

Arbuckle to Tell What He Knows About Death of Beautiful Virginia Rapp

By International News Service.

San Francisco, Sept. 10.—"Fatty" Arbuckle, film comedian and host at a gay party at the St. Francisco Hotel last Monday, was expected by police to arrive here today from Los Angeles to give his version of the events leading up to the sudden illness which seized Miss Virginia Rappe, beautiful young movie actress, in the midst of the party, and which resulted in her death here late yesterday.

According to the hotel management, Arbuckle, with Fred Fisbeck and L. Sherman of Los Angeles, occupied a suite of rooms. A request came about noon last Monday that a phonograph be sent to the suite.

This was complied with on condition that there be no dancing. Later a call came from the rooms for assistance, stating a woman in the party had become ill.

Assistant Manager H. J. Boyle responded and found Miss Rappe lying on a bed, light clad and unconscious. Arbuckle was clad in pajamas and a bathrobe, it was said, explaining that the actress had called while he was having breakfast in his room.

Miss Rappe was removed to a hospital the next day and several other physicians called in consultation. Medical science was of no avail and death came late yesterday.

Having ascertained that bottles were in evidence on the occasion of the party, Coroner Leland ordered an investigation. It is understood that the first analysis of physicians was acute alcholism, but that later a more serious condition became apparent.

According to Boyle when he arrived at Arbuckle's room, there were several women and two men in the room.

New Commander of State Artillery Brigade

RICHARD K. HALE,
Appointed Brigadier-General by Governor Cox to succeed John H. Sherburne, who resigned.

HALE APPOINTED SUCCESSOR TO SHERBURNE

Governor Selects Assistant Public Works Commissioner as Brigade Commander

Colonel Richard K. Hale of Brookline today was appointed by Governor Cox as brigadier-general to succeed John H. Sherburne, who resigned from the field artillery, when the promise of Vice-President Coolidge, as Governor, that an artillery battery would be retained in Worcester was not lived up to.

The move, coming on the heels of wholesale resignations and their subsequent withdrawals, was believed to presage peace in the ranks of the guard.

General Hale, who has been assistant commissioner of the Department of Public Works, entered military service as a private in Battery A on November 24, 1902, and was placed on the retired list November 26, 1920, with the rank of colonel in the Massachusetts National Guard and holds a commission as colonel in the Officers' Reserve Corps.

He quickly won recognition after enlistment, rising to corporal, and sergeant and on October 22, 1906, received his first commission as a first lieutenant. He was made captain on February 13, 1913, major of the First Field Artillery March 3, 1916, lieutenant-colonel of the First Regiment Field Artillery June 28, 1917, and on July 28, 1917, mustered into the Federal service as lieutenant-colonel.

He saw service in the troubles on the Mexican border and in the World War overseas. On February 27, 1918, he was assigned as assistant to the chief of staff of the Second Artillery Corps and on February 3, 1919, was made assistant to the chief of staff at the headquarters of the American embarkation centre.

He was made chief of staff of the 26th Division in May, 1918, and in July, 1917 attended the general staff college.

$10,000,000 LOSS AS WATERS SWEEP OVER STRICKEN CITY

By International News Service.

San Antonio, Texas, Sept. 10.—Estimates of the dead running as high as 500, and property damage believed to exceed $10,000,000, marked the inundation of the central part of this city by a great flood early today.

A considerable part of the residential section was submerged.

Five bridges spanning the San Antonio river, in the centre of the city, were destroyed by the waters. Telephone and telegraph communication, trolley service and electric lights and power were out of commission.

Newspaper offices were without news facilities. Wild rumors filled the city, and relief work was badly handicapped.

Martial law was asked of Colonel Thomas H. Slavin, chief of staff of the Eighth Corps Area, and was to be granted.

Soldiers from Camp Travis and Fort Sam Houston were rushed to the city to prevent looting.

The estimate of the dead was given out by Mayor O. B. Black.

Twenty-one bodies, mostly those of women and children, had been recovered at 10 o'clock. From every part of the flooded area reports of additional dead bodies are being brought in and as rapidly as possible they are being gathered for identification.

MANY HOUSES ENGULFED.

The greatest loss of life was in the Mexican settlement in the western part of the city, where the flood waters engulfed hundreds of homes before their occupants had a chance to make their way to safety.

The south section of the city was also heavily hit by the swirling waters. Hundreds of houses in this district were swept from their foundation and dashed to destruction against each other.

Under military orders a "dead line" was established around the flooded area shortly before noon today. Soldiers and police then began to drive all persons out of the area. Thousands of spectators and homeless refugees were in the area and were hampering the work of searching for dead bodies.

Red Cross workers were ordered to the city by Acting Eighth Corps Area Commander General John Hines to assist in the relief work.

The rise of the river began at 10 o'clock last night. Before citizens realized the danger, a wall of water rushed through the streets and the inhabitants were held powerless in their homes.

At 4 o'clock this morning the raging

IRISH ENVOYS TO PARLEY ARE CHOSEN

Peace Conference Assured; Griffith to Head the Delegation

London, Sept. 10 (By the Associated Press).—The Dublin correspondent for the Westminster Gazette today sent the following dispatch to his newspaper:

"It can now be stated with authority that representatives from the Dail Eireann will meet the British representatives in a conference at Inverness on September 20.

"As a matter of fact, the Dail representatives already have been decided upon. They include Arthur Griffith, John MacNeill and Robert C. Barton. It is not expected that Eamon DeValera will attend the conference, but he and others will be immediately available for consultation by the Irish representatives."

Dublin, Sept. 10 (By the Associated Press). — A tunnel requiring many weeks to construct was employed Thursday night in effecting the escape of some fifty interned Sinn Feiners from the Curragh internment camp in County Kildare, where about 1,500 prisoners were under guard.

The camp is surrounded by several rows of barbed wire entanglement and is heavily guarded by soldiers.

The prisoners built the tunnel underthe barbed wire, using some of the flooring of their huts for props. The most difficult part was to elude the guard. This was done by creating a diversion Thursday evening.

Numerous prisoners gave songs and recitations which received great applause, both from other interned men and, it is said, from the guard. While this was proceeding between forty and fifty men passed through the tunnel and have not been seen since.

RELIEF WORK BEGUN WITH HUNT FOR BODIES IN SAN ANTONIO

FLOOD'S WATERS RECEDE

waters had reached their height and began slowly to recede.

As the raging torrents swept through the streets, entire families could be seen floating on the roofs of houses in the midst of the waters.

The great loss of life which will not be accurately known for days, is due to the fact that the river rose so suddenly that no warnings could be sent out.

Sleeping inhabitants were aroused by the roar of the angry waters to find themselves surrounded by the flood. Guests in the three big hotels, in the downtown sections were marooned on upper floors as the water rose and put elevators out of commission.

The flood came from an unprecedented rainfall which caused a quick rise in the San Antonio river and Alazan creek.

By 3:30 o'clock this morning relief work was under systematic way and the flood sufferers were being cared for in a number of sections of the city. Boats were at work taking people from homes which had withstood the waters, while guards were patrolling the edges of the various areas inundated by the water.

FLOOD'S RISE RAPID.

In less than one-half hour, from 11:15 until 11:40 o'clock last night, a rise of 14 inches was recorded by the gauge in the San Antonio River at St. Mary's street bridge.

Water to a depth of eight feet was flowing down River avenue. Families in the neighborhood of Josephine street and the river, sent out a hurried call for aid at 11 o'clock and, fleeing from their homes, were unable to save furniture or other possessions.

Mrs. Alma E. Lemand and two children of South Laredo street and Martha Grant and wife, also living on South Laredo street were reported missing this morning.

The great flood district extends from Brackenridge Park south along the river through the business district. It also extends along the entire lengths of Alazan and San Pedro creeks. Flood waters were five feet deep in Crockett street at 8 o'clock this morning and the flood extended as far up town as Avenue C.

West Commerce street was flooded.

Soldiers are patrolling the downtown district to prevent looting.

HOUSES WASHED AWAY.

Along Alazan Creek three houses were washed away.

In the downtown business district, merchants called out extra help to remove valuable merchandise from basements and lower floors of the submerged buildings.

One body, that of a Mexican woman, was taken from the I. & G. N. bridge, the first known victim of the flood.

Police cars at daylight went out Avenue C, where basements were completely torn up for many blocks.

Plate glass windows were broken, articles of furniture, automobiles and automobile accessories were scattered pell mell along the thoroughfare.

Street cars were standing where they had been abandoned by their crews.

San Antonio Laid Out in Earth Bowl

By International News Service.

San Antonio, Tex., Sept. 10.—Even as Pueblo, Colo., was built on the deserted bed of a river that returned to claim its ancient course and hundreds of human lives, the business district and many homes of San Antonio was laid out in the bottom of an earth bowl of concrete with streams that were shallow and almost still until today, when torrents from the highlands flooded the bowl as if to reek vengeance on the hundreds of humans who had dared to establish themselves there.

The San Antonio River and its tributaries, San Pedro and Alazan Creeks, "snake" their way through the business section of San Antonio, the course of the stream forming gigantic "S's."

The width of the San Antonio River is not more than fifty feet in the city proper and before the waters were muddied by surging tidal waves from the Highlands, the bottom could easily be seen from above any street in the business section.

St. Vincent's Cotton Crop Razed by Storm

St. Vincent, Windward Islands, Sept. 9 (By the Associated Press).—St. Vincent's fine Island cotton crop for 1921 was almost entirely destroyed by the cyclonic storm which swept over the Windward Islands Thursday. The sugar cane fields were flattened and numerous coconnut trees uprooted or stripped.

Besides destroying the growing crop the storm did considerable damage to buildings. The public jetty in Georgetown was demolished, the sea there having made even greater inroads than it did in the tornado of 1898.

Two Dead, Houses Razed in South Dakota Cyclone

CREPE AND RING SYMBOLS OF WEST ROXBURY TRAGEDY

Beware of this bad woman She had no eyes and less heart

"NO EYES AND LESS HEART"

The mutilated photograph of Wells' divorced wife, with the eyes crudely torn from the picture, found in the Dedham home of the slayer. Before leaving his residence to kill his former wife and her attorney the murderer had written the notation which appears on the bottom of the photograph.

"WEDDING RING" GUN AND VICTIMS

SLAYER PLANNED TO MARRY AGAIN

trial, which, it is promised, will be soon.

That Wells had planned to marry another woman before a sudden mad purpose drove him to murder was revealed today.

For, in the search of the man, two marriage intentions naming Flonka Uyzak as his intended bride, was found. The woman, a Hungarian, it is understood, has been acting as his housekeeper for several weeks.

How Mrs. Wells had planned to take her children from the clutches of their father since was revealed, when it was found that, preparatory to leaving the home of her friend, Mrs. A. M. Wyman, No. 23 Commonwealth street, she had announced her intention of sending her two daughters aboard at a Shaker colony in the State of Maine.

And, just before leaving, she sewed nearly $400 in her corset, to use, it is supposed, in sending her children away and to go herself, to New York, where she would be away from the danger which she constantly believed lurked about her.

Wells' plans for the killing of the attorney and Mrs. Wells came within an ace of being frustrated by the dream of another woman.

Mrs. Wyman dreamed she saw Mrs. Wells shot down in the street, and was about to warn her, but decided, fearing to worry her unnecessarily.

"I was sure something would happen to her," said Mrs. Wyman, as she talked with a reporter for the Boston American. "In my dream I heard the death shots fired and I saw her fall, dying. Yet I could not tell her of this when she started on her fatal trip to Dedham. I might have been wrong, but I didn't want to worry her."

And then Mrs. Wyman went on to tell how the murdered woman had lived in constant terror of the man she had divorced and who at last sent two bullets crashing into her head as she sat with her lawyer, A. Louis Altmeyer, bound for the Dedham court, and then sent two more crashing into the brain of the lawyer, killing him, too.

"All I could say as she left," said Mrs. Wyman, "was 'God bless you and good luck.'"

"She was constantly in fear of him," went on Mrs. Wyman. "He would come to the house and threaten her. Why last Saturday she told me how he had met her in Dedham on the street and again threatened her and her lawyer as well.

"He said then: 'I want you to return. I can't support the children alone.' And then since then he had sent her telegrams and letters threatening her and demanding that she return to him.

"Why he was living in a house that she had bought with her own money and she was on the way to Dedham to get a court order to dispossess him when he killed her," she sobbed as she thought of the victim who had become almost as a sister to her and with whom she had shared her bed and her fears.

"Mr. Altmeyer, her lawyer," said Mrs. Wyman, "knowing that I was of a nervous temperament and had recently been ill, warned me that it was not best to have Eleanor with me, but I thought too much of her and couldn't bear to have her away, knowing what she was going through.

"So she stayed on and, oh, if I had only told her—perhaps she might have escaped the bullet of that assassin."

Princess Orders 52 Chemises, One for Each Week in Year

By Universal Service.

The lingerie, which is being made by ten special workers, will have a Valenciennes lace trimmings on white ninon, discarding all colored silks and crepes such as are now the most fashionable.

The Princess is said to have ordered fifty-two chemises, one for every week of the year.

GET 15 BARRELS OF MOONSHINE IN FIELD

Earth Plowed Too Much to Deceive "Dry" Raiders at New Bedford

New Bedford, Sept. 10.—Cleverly cached in a plowed field, fifteen barrels of moonshine whiskey were unearthed today by prohibition enforcement agents and a squad of twenty New Bedford police.

It was the biggest liquor haul in New England.

Camouflaging their operations so cleverly, the "moonshiners" overdid themselves—they plowed too much, until suspicions were aroused where nothing grew.

Truly there must be a great crop there, quoth passersby, as they watched the scratch of many a plump tollers. Plowing and plowing some more, yet no crops.

At length someone whispered the breath of suspicion. And someone else passed the word, until at last the police heard of it.

"Smells queer for a freshly planted field," quoth one sleuth as he strolled by.

And so it happened that at about noon today a raiding party, armed not with axes and other paraphernalia to batter in doors, but with shovels and hoes arrived, and began to reap the harvest.

The first hill yielded eleven barrels. And before they had dug long, fifteen barrels of "hard licker" had been unearthed. And with the fifteen barrels came a large quantity of mash in various stages of fermentation, and twenty barrels of molasses.

Inside of half an hour the field, at No. 18 Orchard street, had become the centre of a curious, interested throng.

No arrests had been made at a late hour, but it was reported that warrants would be sworn out shortly.

2,000 LEFT HOMELESS BY FLOOD AFTER CLOUDBURST

By Associated Press.

San Antonio, Texas, Sept. 10.—With twenty-two bodies recovered out of an estimated death list placed by some as high as 500, San Antonio today is digging from the battered the worst flood in its history.

Two thousand people are homeless. A cloudburst in the Olmos Valley, north of the city, sent a flood of water down the San Antonio River, which, joining with flood waters from the Alazan and San Pedro creeks on the west, completely inundated a large part of the business section and several residence districts.

As the waters recede, organized bands of workers and rescuers are searching the ruins.

A survey is being made of the damage done, and a meeting of military officials at city and county heads and the Chamber of Commerce is to be held, at which relief plans will be put into operation.

The Alamo, "the cradle of Texas liberty," escaped damage by waters due to its elevation.

San Antonio is a city of about 175,000 persons. Besides being the largest city in Texas, it is the military headquarters for Texas and New Mexico, and has a division stationed here.

MILLIONAIRE IS ACCUSED OF GAY BOSTON TRIP

Wife Charges Syracuse Manufacturer With Flirtation While in Hub

Syracuse, N. Y. Sept. 10.—Did Samuel Elman, millionaire manufacturer and former Boston boy, kick up his heels figuratively and literally and enjoy a merry flirtation with a cabaret girl while away on a "business trip" to Boston several years ago?

Mrs. Elman, who has entered counter charges to his suit for divorce, alleges such is the case. Mr. Elman claims his trip was strictly one of business and that he didn't pass his time with the senorita or any other plump and very blonde young woman.

All this is being threshed out here at a hearing of the warmly contested divorce suit, and the final out-to is expected to come one week from Monday when a legal battle royal over snappy bits of testimony, said to have been taken in Boston, is to be staged.

The woman in the case, according to Mrs. Elman's allegations, is a Miss Minnie Leitch. But Elman claims he never saw nor met such a young woman. Miss Leitch, herself, was not produced as a witness.

The first rift came one Summer's day in 1920 when Elman, with his son and a detective, stole to the family home in Syracuse and found Mrs. Elman and David Coan, a well-known optometrist. What Mr. Elman saw was enough to cause him to spring upon Coan, the latter flesing minues part of his shirt.

Then Elman sued for divorce and Mrs. Elman demanded a trial. And with this came Mrs. Elman's answer and counter charges, and the story of Elman's "night out."

And now comes the legal battle to decide as to whether certain bits of testimony, gleaned during the taking of testimony in Boston, is to be allowed.

OFFICER SEIZES MAN IN SOUTH END CHASE

Ganley resisted, and the two struggled until Ganley broke away and fled to a barn, from which Callahan finally dislodged him and reserves arrested.

Vagrancy Decrease Due to Drive by Ledoux

Reports on the police blotter at police headquarters testify to the effects of the work now being done by Urbain Ledoux for the unemployed of the city.

During a similar period in the first of August eleven were arrested on similar charges. All were paroled when arraigned in police court. Police are inclined to credit Ledoux for the shrinkage in vagabond cases.

5,000 WEEP AT 'SLAVE'S' STORY ON BLOCK

board. He also got $20 from the crowd. Mrs. Jackson took the first man who was placed on the block at the beginning of the auction several days ago."

25 'SLAVES' ON SALE.

Ledoux today resumed his auction of human beings, "knocking down" twenty-five men from the "slave block."

Of these twenty-five derelicts twenty were former service men, and several pathetic incidents occurred when they were sold to former brothers-in-arms who were the highest bidders.

The first man placed on the block today, Albert Salvey, formerly of the 101st Infantry, was knocked down to his "buddy" in service, Edward Dickson, who was purchased yesterday by I. Edgar Paradis of No. 63 St. Botolph street.

Through the generosity of his benefactor Dickson was able to secure Salvey, who has been out of work two months, for two weeks' board and room.

SLEPT ON COMMON A WEEK.

As the two former marines, who had been inseparable throughout the war, and after, clasped hands with tear-filled eyes on the bandstand, the vast gathering burst into a roar of appreciation that was heard blocks away.

Dickson is the man who collapsed on the block yesterday, just before being bidden by Paradise. His "buddy," Auctioneer C. L. Byrnes stated, had slept on the Common a week and had been without food for three days before he was taken in charge by Chaplain of the Unemployed on Howard street.

"The next victim was Francis E. Gerry, a forty-odd-year-old veteran of the war, who fought with the Canadian forces. A massively built man, about six feet tall, he was stripped to the waist by Auctioneer Byrnes, who drew the attention of the throng to his magnificent torso.

Byrnes then appealed to his hearers in the name of democracy, and Gerry was sold to William M. Pingree of No. 143 Main street, Saugus, for two weeks' board and room.

IDLE SINCE JULY 5.

Charles Howard Brandon, also a former marine, who was one of the first members of the A. E. F. to go over in June, 1917, remained idle after the armistice was signed, although badly wounded, followed Gerry to the block.

It was announced that he had been out of work since July 5 last. He was sold to F. K. Whitton of No. 70 Sumner street, Hyde Park, also a wounded ex-service man.

Ledoux marched to the bandstand prior to the auction, heading a line of derelicts, and stated that all but twenty-five men in the line-up had already been sold. Of the total, five were over forty years of age, and an equal number were between thirty and forty years.

Before turning up the work of auctioning off the men, Ledoux addressed the crowd in regard to an article which he said had been made against him by a newspaper, not the Boston American. He said he was surprised that this newspaper should be so taken in by a press agent as to publish the story in question.

STATEMENTS FALSE.

He declared that statements to the effect that the auction was staged in connection with any press agents, managers or any parties connected with a theatrical production to be given in Boston were absolutely false.

"I positively state," he declared, "that at no time have I been, directly or indirectly, or consulted with any person on this subject. I have had this on a spiritual plane, it is purely a work of inspiration on my part. I am not auctioning these men off not for any press agent stunt, but in order that they might be able to give food to-day, another week or another month.

"Again I state that the work is purely spiritual. I am working with God for the uplift of my fellow men, and the story in the paper was a brazen put over by a press agent of the theatrical production. I condole with the public and the press agent's employment the press agent.

"I fully realize human frailties. Curiosity was one of these, and I am sorry to say that the press today often comes down to the level of the curious. I wish it were the time of Dana and Greeley when the press guided public opinion. I know many of these pencils (referring to the reporters) are not free. —The Fourth Estate is not free today.

MOORS GATHER FOR ATTACK ON SPANISH FORT

Field Guns Hauled Up Mountain Side for Bombardment of Melilla

Melilla, Morocco, Sept. 5. (By the Associated Press)—Movements of the Moroccan tribesmen around Melilla, which are being closely observed by the Spanish garrison here, indicate the Moors are making elaborate plans for bombarding this important Spanish fortress.

The rebels have mounted three field guns on the Hardaf Mountain and in the Gourouga group near Nador irbsemas have been seen pulling cannon and limbers up the hillsides by ropes.

The Hardaf Mountain consists of three peaks, including Hasel, whence Melilla can be bombarded. The Moors also are able to operate their cannon seaward from Sidi-Shmed-El-Had in the effort to harass the war vessels entering the Chico bay.

The Moroccans, according to native information, plan to bombard Melilla in an endeavor to produce a panic and thereafter, if the plan proves successful, to launch an attack, using dynamite and bombs.

The Moroccan forces facing Melilla are calculated to number approximately 9,000 fighters, besides several large unattached contingents of Riffians, including 6,000 infantry and 500 cavalry in Nador and vicinity, distributed over various comanding positions facing the Spanish front.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN GREETED LIKE A KING ON ARRIVAL IN LONDON

COMEDIAN MOVED TO TEARS

By International News Service.

London, Sept. 10.—A welcome exceeding anything ever given to royalty was accorded Charlie Chaplin, the famous American screen comedian, when he arrived in London today from New York.

The screen star wept at the cordiality of the tremendous ovation and finally had to be rescued from the immense crowd by a detachment of police.

Despite the large force of police, the crowd broke through the barriers when Chaplin arrived at Waterloo station.

THOUSANDS AT STATION.

Thousands of men, women and children surged forward attempting to embrace the comedian and shake him by the hand. There were shouts of "Hello, Charlie," and "Don't forget any pies" when the liner Olympic touched that port which gave him a foretaste of what to expect in England—his native land.

Charlie stood in the door of the railway car and smiled at his English admirers as they surged around him with shouts and cries of adulation. Then his emotion overcame him and he wept.

Eventually a dozen policemen rescued the comedian from a crush which rivalled anything ever seen upon the screen.

CARRIED BY POLICE.

The policemen picked up the diminutive comedian and bore him upon their shoulders through the crowd while the noise redoubled and Charlie waved his hat. Chaplin was finally placed in a waiting limousine and was driven to the Ritz Hotel between lanes of cheering people.

"It was the greatest thing I ever saw," said Charlie, mopping his face at the hotel.

The comedian will be entertained by many fashionable families during his stay.

Chaplin's arrival was heralded by a special corps of newspaper correspondents who went to Cherbourg to greet him. They took the comedian by surprise. Instead of finding a man full of antics and bursting with quips and jokes, they found a serious and contemplative person.

GOING TO RUSSIA.

"After my visit in London I am going to Russia," Chaplin told the correspondent of the Daily Express. "You probably wonder why I wish to go to Russia of all countries. I will tell you. I am immensely interested in that country and the effort of the Russians towards social reconstruction after the chaos they have been through."

Asked especially as to his visit to London, Chaplin said:

I don't want to be stared at like a freak. I just want to be able to walk the streets of London like any other citizen."

The interviews given by Chaplin at Cherbourg were all "played up" with pictures.

The Mayor of Southampton and a delegation from the Municipal Council met the screen star at the White Star pier.

The Mayor made a speech of welcome, addressing Chaplin as the "King of Mirth."

"I came England to escape from myself," said Chaplin seriously. "That is impossible in the United States. I want more or less seclusion." It was raining and Chaplin referred to the weather, saying:

"I have been away many years, and I am not surprised to find it raining when back here."

Some one asked the comedian if he was going to wear his famous shoes with the turned-up toes to the British museum.

"No," replied Charlies, reflectively, "I am going to give them to a friend of mine in my will."

Charlie must have felt right at home as he began to reply for a dozen moving picture operators trained machines on him and ground out yard after yard of film.

TWO BOYS DEAD FROM GAS, MAN IS DYING

Fatal Victims Unidentified in Rooming House at Providence

Providence, R. I., Sept. 10.—Two unidentified little boys are dead and a middle-aged man, who had registered as Louis Bauner, no address, is dying as a result of a flow of gas into their bed chamber from a tap believed to have been opened purposely by Bauner.

Bauner registered at the rooming house a few days ago, bringing the boys with him. Although the youngsters have not yet been identified, it is believed they were his sons. They were between nine and thirteen years of age. Clothing found in the room bears the marks of Boston and Lawrence stores.

Shifres was arraigned in the Municipal court and discharged. He said that on his return home he discovered that his wife had left him, taking with her most of their valuables and all her own clothing.

OFFICERS WHO QUIT GUARD WILL STAY

Withdraw Their Resignations After Personal Plea Made by Sherburne

By HARRY A. SENWELL
Author of the History of the Yankee Division Overseas.

Aroused to a pitch of indignation by the charges that they were "fat-headed" and "cocky," overseas officers today declared that members of the adjutant-general's department of this State were "antiquated pensioners," unfit to hold their offices.

A wave of feeling swept through the officer personnel of the National Guard, adding fuel to the flames of controversy as to what is wrong with the organization, as made public by the Boston American.

As a result of this feeling, but more largely because of personal loyalty to Brigadier General John M. Sherburne, more than two-score artillery officers attempted to follow the action of his executive officer, Major John Simpkins, and turn in their resignations.

Among the number was Major Daniel Needham, the general's law partner in the firm of Sherburne, Needham & Powers, who was one of the first to offer his resignation.

RESIGNATIONS WITHDRAWN.

To all General Sherburne made the same reply; that the service should be placed above everything else, and that it was his wish and the officers' duty to remain and give their best efforts.

In consequence all the resignations were withdrawn, and it is probable that the officer personnel of the field artillery brigade will remain intact.

Those who offered their resignations were of all grades from lieutenants up, and held assignments of varying importance throughout the brigade. All had served in France with General Sherburne and his word was their law. For that reason the resignations were sent to him, despite the fact that he has left the service. It was also designed as a testimonial of their esteem.

Other officers in the Guard, however, unable or unwilling to take similar action, vented their disapproval of the present administration and their resentment of the charges made by Lieutenant-Colonel George W. Langdon of the Adjutant-General's Department, that they were "fatheaded" and "cocky."

Lieutenant-Colonel George H. Benson's name was inadvertently used instead of that of Lieutenant-Colonel Langdon, the author of the charges against the overseas officers.

"ANTIQUATED PENSIONERS."

"What right have those antiquated pensioners to criticise us," said one overseas officer no longer connected with the guard. "While we were in France doing the dirty work, they were sitting around the State House drawing enough money to keep them in food and clothing. That's about all they get and that's about all they want.

"As a matter of fact it's all they are worth and the Governor coincided with that view when he vetoed an appropriation to increase the salary of the adjutant-general $200 a year. If the commander-in-chief of the state forces did not consider his chief of staff worth $200 a year more, and the chief of staff, who is the adjutant-general, remained in office, it doesn't speak very well for him, does it?

"They say they would not take suggestions from us because it would be humiliating. What about old maneuvers and officers' schools, where lieutenants and captains frequently instructed the colonels and majors? Furthermore, it would have been a different matter if we had been appointed as a board of competent overseas officers when the Guard was reorganized.

LACK EXPERIENCE.

"It is always desirable to obtain the best possible information when starting any project, military or otherwise, but experience is preferable to theory any time. That has been demonstrated by the War Department, which ruled that all staff officers should have active service.

"Adjutant General Stevens has had no field experience to speak of, with the exception of a short term as major of the old First Corps Cadets. I doubt if he has any actual knowledge of handling large bodies of men, and his assistants are not much better.

"As an example of the inefficiency in the department, let me mention the mixup that occurred when the reorganization was begun. Infantry outfits were assigned to the biggest armories, while artillery were placed in buildings which gave them no room to move around. Furthermore, motorized units were sent to places where there was absolutely no room for their equipment. If the original plan had gone through it would have required twenty years and the expenditure of thousands of dollars.

SHOULD BE JUNKED.

"The reference to the Spanish War as being something not worth bothering about, is another evidence of the picayune mentalities that sway the destinies of the Guard. The Spanish War may have meant little to them, but to me, who saw my friends and companions dropping around me from disease, it meant much. I don't think the casualties I saw in France affected me so much. Those men at least were victims of the enemy, while in the Spanish War our men went down because of the negligence of the government.

"That statement, reflecting as it does on the record of our own troops, is just one more reason why the present administration of the Guard should be junked, and a new start made."

LANDLADY SUES TENANTS IN BRIGHTON

Huitman Backs Occupants of Quint Avenue Apartments in Row

Another fight between landlord and tenant came today as the latest development in Boston's "rent war." Mrs. Rena Yetta Merkelson, No. 40 Shirley avenue, Revere, brought suit in Brighton Court to eject from her premises ten tenants who refused to pay rent increases on the first of this month.

Coincident with her opening a court battle, the tenants received a communication from Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman of the Commission on the Necessaries of Life characterizing Mrs. Merkelson agent, Edward A. Meany, as "the last of the rent speculators."

Rents in the apartments at Nos. 15 and 21 Quint avenue, Brighton, where the tenants live, have been increased from $840 in 1919 to $65.50 this year, it is said. The tenants claim that on September 1 they were notified that the rates had been raised to $85 a month. They promptly appealed to the Necessaries Board, and were told that the increase was excessive.

Commissioner Hultman denounced Meany, who has real estate offices at No. 126 Massachusetts avenue, saying that "he has consistently refused to co-operate with the commission."

Wait of Hours For 'Central' Turns Man's Sanity

By International News Service.

New York, Sept. 10.—For hours George R. Crowell sat with the telephone receiver to his ear. He had called a number. At last the operator spoke, "What number did you call, please."

Crowell's eye grew cold. For reply, he tore the telephone from the wall by its roots. Then seizing his cane he began to smash everything in sight. He wrecked the furniture and pitched some of it into the street. He began to smash the windows of his office. Kind neighbors, their hearts filled with understanding, said nothing until Crowell extended his activities to their offices. Then they called the police.

Today Crowell is under observation. He is being kept carefully from sight of a telephone instrument or the sound of a telephone bell.

FIND BODY OF DAUGHERTY'S COMPANION

Remains of Carl Ausmus Are Discovered in Chicago Garage

By International News Service.

Chicago, Sept. 10.—Chicago's "hand-cuff murder mystery" became a puzzling double murder this afternoon when the body of Carl Ausmus, an automobile salesman, was found in a garage in Westlake street.

Ausmus was the companion of Bernard J. Daugherty, Packard automobile salesman, whose body was found handcuffed and mutilated in the Desplaines River yesterday.

Harvey W. Church, suspected slayer of Daugherty and Ausmus, was expected here late today following his arrest at Antigo, Wisconsin. Finding of the body of Ausmus in a garage strengthened the police theory that he and Daugherty were the victims of automobile thieves.

Providence, R. I., Sept. 10.—Thomas J. Cavanaugh, Civil War veteran from the Soldiers' Home in Togus, Me., today asked police to help him find a lady who, he said, had decamped with all of his clothes save one old suit, even after he had provided her with rooms at No. 9 Church street.

Cavanaugh gave a comprehensive description of the lady as follow: "She is fifty years old, five feet eight inches tall, weighs about 115 pounds, has gray hair but wears a red wig. She has false teeth and stoops when she walks."

DENY LARCENY OF 100 GALLONS OF ALCOHOL

Charles Duncan of Hunneman street, Roxbury, and William R. Turner, colored, of East Lenox street, Roxbury, pleaded not guilty in Roxbury court today on the charge of breaking and entering the storehouse on Washington street and stealing 100 gallons of alcohol, said to be the property of the United States government. They were held in $2,000 each for a hearing September 15 as a result.

The storehouse at No. 3026 Washington street, Roxbury, is owned by Richard J. Barsamian. It is used by the government prohibition department for the storage of seized liquors.

Duncan is a contractor, and the police say Turner is employed by him. Both denied any connection with the break. Police say they have recovered twelve gallons of the alcohol.

WARD FOILED IN PLOT TO FLEE FROM PRISON

Extension Ladder Found Hidden at Charlestown by Barney's Companion in Flight

Charles Ward, the mulatto serving a 35 to 40-year sentence in the State Prison at Charlestown, who escaped from the prison a year ago last May, is in solitary confinement following discovery of an extension ladder and other equipment, which it is believed were to be used to effect another jail delivery.

Ward was the "master mind" in the escape of Barney, Ward and Manster, making all the tools which were used to make a quick, safe getaway from the institution by the trio. Ward, with another prisoner, a "lifer" and one of the most notorious in the prison, who about a dozen years ago was caught with three others in an attempt to escape, were seen together in the prison yard, pointing out various measurements of the walls and roofs of the prison building.

An officer on duty in the yard, becoming suspicious of their actions, reported the matter to the officials. A search was instituted by the deputy warden and other officers, with the result that the ladder and other equipment were found under the work bench used by Ward in the shoe shop.

WOMEN DOCTORS WOULD BANISH CORSETS

Uncorseted Girls Will Develop Endurance Equal to Man's, Experts Declare

By WINIFRED VAN DUZER
Universal Service Staff Correspondent

New York, Sept. 10.—Old corset up for trial again!

Charged this time with menacing the life, health, beauty and general utility of woman before a court of women physicians!

Found guilty and sentenced to banishment!

How Broadway—where no corset has been for many a long, long season—will smile!

An afterword was added to the trial by Dr. Mary Halton, specialist on woman's diseases, and one time chief surgeon at the women's hospital here and inspector for the Board of Health.

"Women cannot walk, dance or sit properly with the body bound. Even those quite ignorant of health laws know how essential exercise is for physical well being.

JUST HAVE FREE PLAY.

"But benefit of exercise lies in free play of muscles.

"Woman, and especially girls, require development and strengthening of abdominal muscles. Such preparation brings about conditions for better motherhood by and by. It is impossible with these muscles held rigid in a steel and whalebone cage.

"Woman's refusal to brook such barbarity indicates progress more startling even than that which brought about universal enfranchisement!"

The women physicians who condemned the corset at their convention now being held in Baltimore, announced that statistics indicate prolonged life among women who discard "old ironsides."

Their final pat on the back of those progressive feminines who have freed themselves from the shackles was the statement that endurance and muscular activity equal to man's is being developed among the uncorseted.

BACKED BY INSURANCE FIRMS.

The stand of the medical women is practically that made public by insurance company officials and workers at their conventions in Chicago recently. One of their findings was that women who wear no corset are far better risks than those who do. Their records showed less illness and fewer accidents besides longer life among strangers to stays.

The public battle in the case versus Old Corset, in which the last bit of evidence to date was added by Dr. Halton, began four years ago when Mrs. Anna Lee of Indianapolis drafted a bill prohibiting the manufacture of corsets for introduction in the Indiana Legislature.

Mrs. Lee explained her action this way:

"Of the three great evils—corset, white plague, whiskey—the corset is the greatest. There is more tuberculosis in children of corset-deformed mothers than in whiskey-drinking fathers. Tubercular children never were known until the corset was invented, and thousands of deformed children are the result of wearing of corsets by others."

Mrs. Lee claimed to have made a twenty-five-year study of results of corset wearing.

WHAT CORSETS DO.

No such drastic possibilities were admitted by Dr. Halton. According to women physicians, there are some of the things that the corset does to the wearer:

Destroys natural, graceful lines; destroys effect of simple dressing; causes awkwardness in sitting and walking; precludes deep breathing; makes business and professional competition with men impossible.

Even Dr. R. H. Dunn, head of the woman's department of the Life Extension Institute, an organization endorsing and approving corsets, makes her recommendations with explanations. She said:

"It is our opinion that every pair of corsets sold should be accompanied by special illustrated exercises for strengthening muscles that otherwise it might weaken."

Dr. Dunn declared that of 15,000 women examined last year, not one had the correct physiological posture. Seventy per cent of them were corsets which encouraged faulty posture.

SO far the Paris openings have shown a diversity of line and fabric great enough to include the favorites of almost every woman. The figure at the left presents a slender short-sleeved gown of slate-colored Canton crepe piped with black and silver braid and having smartly draped front and back panels of silver lace. The silver lace is used also for the corsage. A slim section of crepe extends from one side of the skirt, making a short train.

A BOUFFANT, wide-sleeved evening coat for the coming season might, at first glance, be a frock instead, it so closely follows the silhouette used for many of the late models. Of brocaded velvet in Chinese blue figured with silver, it adds a double line of silver nailettes to its body and has silver cloth collar and cuffs. In further imitation of the newest evening gowns the sleeves are of a contrasting fabric in a matching shade, Canton crepe being chosen in this instance.

'BIG FOUR' PLAN FOR SESSION OF ARMS

Hughes, Root, Lodge and Underwood Debate U. S. Policies to Be Pursued

By International News Service

Washington, Sept. 10.—The American "Big Four"—Secretary of State Hughes, Elihu Root, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, and Senator Oscar W. Underwood—will soon begin a series of preliminary conferences to determine policies to be pursued in the November armament and Far East Conference, it was said today.

"It is extremely desirable," said a high administration official today, "that the American delegation enter the conference with as much batting practice as possible. The next big task confronting President Harding and his aides is the selection of the American advisors, a task hardly less important than the selection of the "Big Four."

While the policies which America will pursue in the conference will be determined by the four principal representatives, the advisory section will supply the all-important information and data upon which these policies will be formulated. And the members of the advisory section will be selected with infinite care.

It is the present intention of the administration to limit the personnel of the advisory section to 12 or 15 members, although there is no limit placed on the number. Advices from both Great Britain and Japan, for instance, indicate that their delegations of advisers and technical experts will run as high as 200.

It is the belief of the administration, however, the smaller the representation the more smoothly it will function and the tendency is to make the American advisory section one of "quality" instead of "quantity."

SOUTH AMERICA DELEGATES ALL FOR ROOT

To Vote for Him as International Court Judge at Geneva Wednesday

Geneva, Sept. 10. (By Associated Press.)—Elihu Root will receive the unanimous vote of the South American delegates to the League of Nations assembly when the election of judges for the permanent international court of justice is held on Wednesday next.

Many of them also favor Mr. Root as chief justice of the court. They express confidence Mr. Root will accept the post when he sees the unanimity of the demand that he serve, and plans for his election are going forward on this theory.

Dispatches from Washington telling of Mr. Root's conferring with President Harding are interpreted in league circles to mean that Mr Root will withdraw his objections to election to the court if President Harding approves.

Delegates to the assembly express the hope they will receive definite indications that Mr. Root will accept before the assembly election of judges is held.

DORT COUPE IS PRIZE TO BEST GUESSER

Estimate how much gasoline is contained in a large glass receptacle now at the ground floor of the Utterback-Gleason Company's store at 870 Commonwealth avenue. Then guess how far a Dort touring car will run on the contents. If you hit nearest to the correct answer you will become the owner of a Dort coupe, one of the really beautiful new models of the present year. This estimating contest will be one of the features of the Dort Autumn opening which the Utterback-Gleason Company will stage all of the coming week beginning Monday.

On this occasion there will be a special display of the Dort sedan, coupe, touring car and roadster—the Dort "family" as it is known—with no change in the chassis other than minor refinements which have suggested themselves to Engineer Planche from time to time.

"From inception Dort cars have been economical and dependable through the simplicity of construction and the insistance of the manufacturer that they be properly built," says J. O. Utterback.

"Now is added the feature of good looks and this combination makes the car the best buy in its class, from our viewpoint, for there is none with so many high spots of excellence.

"There is sure to be the keenest public interest in the estimating contest, which is not only novel, but shows a courageous confidence in the thrift of Dort performance."

The container, holding an amount of gasoline known only to the makers of weights and measures, will occupy a place on the salesroom floor. Those who desire to contest may look the container over any day between now and September 18, but it is pointed out that early voting is highly desirable, as in case of a tie priority of casting will rule. The voter's name and address, as well as his estimate, must be registered on each ballot and the ballot cast in person.

At the end of the voting on September 18 at 6 p. m., the contents of the container will be poured into the tank of a Dort touring car and the car run until the contents are exhausted. The voter who has estimated nearest to the gasoline thus consumed becomes the possessor of the coupe.

The contest will be under the supervision of a committee of representative citizens to be announced later.

Dear Mr. Fixit—

I have a 1916 Ford touring running in good condition with car mounted. When I run up speed on the road, the motor starts to miss fire. Then I have to slow down and run in with better results than before. A new coil has been put on, also new spark plugs, motor which are new. The motor has great power. I have bought new cloes, per- haps been unsuccessful in finding the trouble. Any suggestions I have an idea that the trouble is on the coil, which I have had for six mos. How can I remedy this? Thanking you in advance.—W. J. G., Harrisville, R. I.

Your trouble sounds like a leak somewhere in your spark manifold. You may find that the leak is around one of the gaskets. Tighten the bolts and see if that will help you. Be sure that it has stood that it would change your mixture.

Dear Mr. Fixit—

I have a Ford. It starts on a dry cell battery, but when I crank for a long time, as much as 5 or 10 minutes, it won't start on magneto. What is the trouble? Can you help me?—J. H., Cromwell Bender, Staten Island, N. Y.

It is pretty difficult to diagnose your trouble from the information you have given me. The only thing I can tell you is to clean the carbon out of your motor, grind your valves as over 15 thousand conditions, say that your compression is not too dry or does not have too much gas. Then clean out your gas line and carburetor. Shop not in all. After having done all this and adjusted your carburetor, also examine your spark plug points to see that points are not too far apart, and adjust the timer, on the coils, and clean out your gas tank. Also look for air leaks around your intake manifold and your gaskets. This will help your trouble.

Dear Mr. Fixit—

I have a 1919 Reo which seems to miss at fairly good speed. I have had my motor to at fairly good speed. I have had my motor to several garages and they have said I do not notice it so much. I have ground my valves, cleaned the carbon out of my motor and cleaned my pipes. Still I get this miss. What causes it?—W. C., Harrisville, R. I.

Your valve stem guides or the valves themselves are worn so much so that they leak air and this air is sucked into the motor and changes the mixture. Have new bushings put in or valves with oversize stems.

DORT COUPE TO BE GIVEN AWAY

A novel feature of the Dort Autumn opening which the Utterback-Gleason Company will hold next week is the presentation of a coupe to the person estimating nearest to how far a Dort car will go on the gasoline contents of a large glass container on the salesroom floor.

OVERLAND AUTO PRICES REACH LOW LEVEL

"The most radical reductions in motor car prices in the history of the automobile industry became effective this week upon all models of Willys-Knight and Overland cars, according to an announcement issued over the signature of John N. Willys. His statement of price change came as the feature of the announcement of the Willys-Knight and new series Overland," said Weldon McKone, of Connell, McKone Company, yesterday.

"The new price of the Overland touring car with electric starter, lights and demountable rims is $695. One year ago this car sold for $1,095. The Overland sedan that sold for $1,875 is to be sold for $895. The new prices represent a reduction of approximately 43 per cent. in one year. The 1916 Overland sold for $665, a price that was thought could never be bettered.

"The Willys-Knight touring car selling at $2,800 last year is now listed at $1,525. This is a reduction of approximately 24 per cent. The unheralded announcement by Mr. Willys brings the prices of Overland and Willys-Knight cars lower than ever before.

DUE TO ECONOMIES.

"The reductions were made possible, according to the statement, through remarkable economies in manufacturing methods which have been in process of installation in the great Toledo plants over a period of eighteen months.

"An equally important factor in the price reductions are new raw material purchasing contracts which reflect greatly reduced raw material costs, in this connection it is stated that already the Willys-Overland Company has used 85 per cent. of non-current steel on hand at the beginning of the year.

"The Willys-Overland Company has sold automobiles in the past year, according to retail reports just compiled, to a total value of $65,000,000. In the announcement Mr. Willys said, "We have cut prices to the bone, volume production at last has freed us from the shackles of war priced materials. The public now gets the benefit of great manufacturing efficiency, low costs, and the lowest prices in our history."

IN FRONT RANK.

The new reduction in prices places the Overland and Willys-Knight cars in the front price rank of their classes. For the past eight months the records of these cars in the field have shown that they were the superior of any cars in their class in economy and performance. Now they stand forth as leaders in price and performance.

For a car of its weight and high class the Willys-Knight also has made some remarkable records in economy of gasoline and oil consumption, factory reports from owners showing that the careful driver gets from twenty to twenty-six miles to the gallon of gasoline.

ELECTION IN NEW MEXICO TO TEST G.O.P. POWER

Senatorial Contest to Show If Party Has Retained Strength, Hapgood Says

By NORMAN HAPGOOD,
Staff Correspondent of the Boston American.

Washington, Sept. 10.—The first test of whether there has been any national swing away from the Republican party, since last November, occure on the 20th of this month; but it is not a very good test.

On that day New Mexico decides whether her present Senator is to succeed himself or be followed by a Democrat.

It is not a good test partly because the electorate is small, partly because the fight has been local in its nature. George White, the Democratic National chairman, who has been running things pretty much his own way, without consulting any of the leading men in the party except Governor Cox, decided not to make a contest in New Mexico.

HASN'T ANY MONEY.

He has given two reasons. One is the assertion that there is no chance to win. That is a rather long-distance guess, and is probably less important in the chairman's mind than the second reason, which is that he hasn't any money.

The Democratic national committee is so short of money that it is barely able to carry along its current minimum expenses, and is in no position to throw itself into such a campaign as that for the election of a Senator.

Mr. White also takes the position that it is not yet time to offer battle to the Republicans; that it is better to let their policies develop and see which ones are going to break down.

This reason also lacks conviction, since the National Committee is maintaining a publicity bureau in Washington which sends out regularly such arguments against Republican doings as it feels able to finance.

SELECTION OFFERS ONE TEST.

In one way, however, the election does offer a test. Senator Bursum is a complete stand-patter, and whenever there is a fight that amounts to anything it will be an attack on the stand-pat element in the Republican party. Against the loosely-knit, but powerful progressive and agrarian groups the Democrats will naturally have nothing to say, as in those groups lies the greatest danger to the dominant Republican faction.

There is not, I believe, a single subject on which Bursum has voted with the progressive elements. The old guard has had no trustier henchman.

The leadership of the old guard is not what it might be. Mondell has not made an impression of power in the House. In the Senate Penrose, the strongest personality, is sick. Lodge's leadership has been such a failure since the 4th of last March that it is a question of how long he will be allowed to keep it.

Smoot is not constructed personally in the manner that makes a leader, but he is respected for his hard work and his love of economy. He not infrequently breaks away from the party machine where wastefulness is involved.

ON PRIVILEGE COMMITTEE.

Bursum is a member of the committee on privileges and, as such, had to take part in defining the party attitude on the Newberry case.

In enormously intricate and conflicting opinions the Supreme Court decided that, under the lower judge's charge, the verdict against Newberry would have to be upset.

The court seemed to be divided, four to four, on the more fundamental question of whether such a punishment as was attempted by the statute was constitutional.

But this decision does not affect the Senate. It decided, free from technicalities, whether it will sanction the use of money in elections, so flagrantly illustrated in Newberry's case, and forbidden by statute, or whether it will condone it by seating the wealthy claimant.

Bursum has voted in committee in favor of seating Newberry.

One of the scandals of the Senate is its abuse of secret sessions. An attempt was made to end secrecy in considering treaties and in confirming the President's appointments. Lodge led the fight against the change. Bursum voted with him.

VOTED WITH MACHINE.

While the emergency tariff bill was under consideration some of the Progressive Republicans, including Borah and Kenyon, supported Senator Reed's amendment aimed at giving the farmers cheaper machinery. Bursum voted with the machine, as he did in the Packer bill and all the other measures in which the farmers were interested.

He also voted with the conservatives in all the divisions relating to the army and navy. His consistency is unblemished. If the people of New Mexico want to give a vote to the reactionary against the progressive element in the United States Senate they will re-elect Bursum eleven days hence.

"MECCA" NOW COMES TO BOSTON

Entire Original Cast of Great Spectacle to Be Seen at Opera House

After "The Wanderer," "Chu Chin Chow" and "Aphrodite" comes "Mecca," the greatest spectacle of all time.

After "Mecca," there ain't going to be no more," says Morris Gest. Nobody ever imagined it was possible to present such vast spectacles as Gest has placed upon the board, and now Gest, himself, can't think of any way to excell "Mecca," so he isn't going to try.

What is "Mecca," anyway?

Well, it's one of those Oriental extravaganzas conceived by Oscar Asche, creator of "Chu Chin Chow." Its scenes take place in Cairo, Egypt, and Arabia, and it deals with a pilgrimage to Holy Mecca, the city to which all true followers of Mahomet must go once in a lifetime to purge themselves of their sins.

The Arabs in the days of the Caliphs undoubtedly had many faults, but their notions of attractive costumes for young ladies were remarkable indeed. If it were not that they specialized in feminine decorations so skillfully, I suspect nobody would remember them nowadays. Certainly Morris Gest would not have gone to so much trouble and expense to build massive productions like "Chu Chin Chow" and "Mecca."

If you are interested in figures, learn that "The Wanderer" cost $125,000; "Chu Chin Chow," $220,000 and "Mecca," $465,000. Mr. Gest himself buys his suits from Kuppenheimer for about $40 and he only has one hat, a big black one which he bought five years ago from a cow gentleman who was investing in a bigger one.

When "Aphrodite" came here last season the original heroine, Dorothy Dalton, had left the cast. The entire original cast of "Mecca" is coming to the Opera House, headed by Lionel Braham and Gladys Hanson. Even the camels, elephants and hippopotamuses will be the original members of the cast.

To me the marvelous thing about "Mecca" is the ballet, created by Michel Fokine, and enacted upon a vast stairway. This great achievement of the originator of the Ballet Russe was largely responsible for the tremendous popularity of "Mecca" in New York last season.

Ball to the Queen and King

Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford, the king and queen of filmdom, will spend three days in our midst, as the village journal would put it, visiting points of interest, eating banquets proferred by eager subjects and luring the public to "The Three Musketeers" at the Park Square.

Douglas Fairbanks was one of the most gifted of young comedians who were growing up on the American stage when he tried his hand at making a picture some four or five seasons ago. If he had continued on the stage he might have become a real matinee idol and earned in a year about what he now gets in a week swashbuckling in the films. Of course one can't blame him for sticking where the rewards are so enormous, but it's a funny thing about an actor; once he has heard the clapping of the hands out front in his favor he yearns for the sound, and the camera has no hands, only an eye. Some day Douglas Fairbanks will be back on the boards working for a tithe of what the pictures pay him, but getting what he loves better than money.

It's different with Mary Pickford. She is a child of the screen. She began as a very young girl with the old Biograph and her development in the film actress is the development of the film itself. Very likely she can get along quite nicely without the clapping of hands. Probably she hears enough of it when she and Doug make personal appearances in front of the silver sheet for picture propaganda purposes.

In any event they are a good looking pair, and the pictures they have appeared in would never injure anybody's morals.

The Picture Gallery.

Probably the reason that a dramatic editor knows so much about the silent drama is that he has to live in a city some time in advance, is that vaudeville and picture actors are paid enormous salaries, so tell him—not how enormous the salaries are—but all the same. He patronizes a show which is coughing up.

Now Ned Wayburn is bringing an entertainment called "Town Gossip" to the Colonial Theatre next week. Mr. Wayburn is the man who taught the chorus girls to nod their heads first to one side, then to the other, to make graceful and slender curving gestures, to grip one another tightly so that they won't fall and to lean on one leg wagging the other vigorously and alluringly at the audience. He taught the girls many more distinctive attitudes and dances and he is supposed to be one of the best stage managers in the business.

Well, when I made some inquiries of the publicity individual, and several others who said the photographs didn't do them justice, and wouldn't give them to me. You see, this show expects to go into New York and stay all Winter, and it's a big show for us. If we were just coming out of New York now I'd have the pictures, but the originals were taken on Broadway."

"Is that all you have to tell me about the show?"

"Isn't it enough?"

"Don't know but it is."

They Vivisected the Belle.

Persons who are beginning to get a little bald or to find their beard coming out white may distinguish something faintly familiar about the "Whirl of New York," the Winter Garden show which will put up at the Wilbur Monday. The reason is a curious one.

A year or so ago the Shuberts decided to revive "The Belle of New York," the musical comedy which swept the world a quarter of a century ago. The heroine was a Salvation Army girl and Edna May played this part. Dan Daly was also in the piece, and a host of favorites of the period.

It seemed an ideal revival, for its score was as verdant and merry as ever, its comedy clean cut and its characters remarkable. The revival was made, but strange to relate there was something about the show which didn't revive. For one thing there was a flippant attitude towards the Salvation Army which reflected the feelings of a quarter of a century ago, but doesn't go any more. Most people now think of a Salvation lassie as feeding doughnuts under fire to wounded soldiers, thus giving them indigestion, and they like the Salvation army.

And there were other things that were out of date. So it was necessary to do things to "The Belle of New York." They amputated her limbs, they padded her hips, they performed delicate internal operations. They jazzed her up. They interpolated modern songs for some of the least effective of the old melodies. When they were all through there wasn't enough left of "The Belle of New York" to get into an old ladies' home. On the other hand they had a very snappy modern Winter Garden Revue and they took it into the Winter Garden, where it has been running all Summer.

He's the Horse's Press Agent

The author of the following gem of literature is Joe Flynn, publicity representative for "Tickle Me." Flynn carries a watch inscribed "To Joe Flynn, press agent for Joe Flynn, from his pal Frank Tinney." Tinney gave it to him before he read the appended:

"Frank Tinney's white horse is unbelievably trained in the art of cussedness. As you have observed in "Tickle Me," at the Shubert Theatre, this steed makes marvelous reality out of his pretended anger at Tinney, and his fake biting of the comedian's hindquarters is superb acting. At times the horse overplays his attacks, and to such a degree that, according to Tinney, he doesn't know whether to get his ears or his pants insured. But the animal is not content to bite and bite and get nothing but laughs for his work, so he broke over in his local environment and the other night began nipping off the satin ankles which adorn the young women in the "Temptation" number. Waiting in the wings the ladies of the ensemble would suddenly feel a tug from behind and, turning, would see their costumes going down the aisle.

"The stage hands regarded it as capital entertainment, and until the horse was restrained from tearing away the fake applies from the girls' costumes there had been revealed the quickest and completest disrobing that even sophisticated and experienced eyes had ever seen."

After Tinny read it he demanded: "Say, are you working for me or the horse?"

The Brave Days of Old

In the course of Mitzi's delightful performance in "Lady Billy," she has a song in which she imitates girls of half a dozen nations, and one of these is a Japanese girl. In this imitation she sang a scatch of "One Fine Day" from "Butterfly."

And while she was singing that haunting melody my mind harked back nearly twenty years to the last time I had heard that air on that stage.

It was in the days of the Savage English Grand Opera Company. Colonel Savage had beaten all the opera houses and secured the first production rights to "Madame Butterfly," the opera written by Puccini to a libretto made from the play by David Belasco and John Luther Long. It was the first time that American characters had ever been put into grand opera and it was fitting that it should be sung in America in the English tongue.

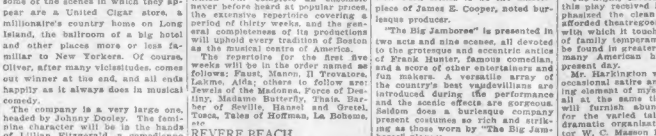
If musical critics ever remember anything, how ashamed they must be at the mistakes in judgment they made. Nobody had a good word to say about "Butterfly" at the time. They predicted it a short life. And their ears were dulled to the appealing and marvelously human music which the Savage company was singing to them.

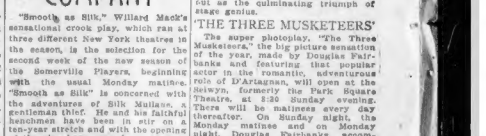
"Butterfly" has never been absent from the repertory of the great opera companies since. It is probably the only grand opera which is so sincere in its ideas and so poignant in its musical thoughts as to make people weep. It will never die.

What an influence for good Savage has been in the American theatre when you think of his English opera companies and his long line of operatta productions, including "The Merry Widow," now so splendidly revived, and "Lady Billy," though by no means pretentious is as sweet as a baby's kiss.

Seeks Peace.

Anna Thornton, the ingenue of "The Big Jamboree" company is spending this week-end among the green hills of Vermont, her childhood home. Miss Thornton is big sister to half a dozen younger girls, and her courage in leaving the farm and going upon the stage makes her the idol of the kiddies. She boasts that she is the peacemaker of the family, for when she is at home she settles all the troubles of the young-





WAYBURN SHOW TO OPEN

At the Colonial Theatre Monday night Ned Wayburn's new musical comedy, "Town Gossip," will be seen for the first time. "Town Gossip" is in two acts and seven scenes, its book being by George E. Stoddard and Wayburn himself, with music by Harold Orlob. The action of the story starts in a small town in New Jersey, but the scenes are later transported to New York, where Oliver Fowler, the hero and village smart-aleck, encounters all sorts of adventures in his effort to conquer the big city. He is followed by his adoring better half and a numerous retinue of relatives and friends, and some of the scenes in which they appear are a United Cigar store, a millionaire's country home on Long Island, the ballroom of a big hotel and other places more or less familiar to New Yorkers. Of course, Oliver, after many vicissitudes, comes out winner at the end, and all ends happily as it always does in musical comedy.

The company is a very large one, headed by Johnny Dooley. The feminine character will be in the hands of Lillian Fitzgerald, a comedienne of rare attainments, who was last seen here in Ed. Wynn's Carnival. Others in the cast are Vinton Freedley, Grace Moore, Helen Broderick Eleanor Griffith, Stanley Ford, Edythe Baker, Florence Earle, Lester Crawford, Lionel Pape, Muriel Stryker, Charles F. Morrison, June Roberts.

REVERE BEACH

In order to accommodate the large number of people spending weekends at the seashore it is announced that all amusements at Revere Beach, New England's huge Summer playground and commonly referred to as "the mecca of the millions" will be opened Saturdays and Sundays until Columbus Day.

SNAPPY SHOW COMING TO GAYETY

"The Big Jamboree," hailed as the snappiest, most frivolous, most merriest show on the American burlesque stage is the attraction scheduled for the Gayety Theatre for next week.

This production is declared by New York critics to be the masterpiece of James E. Cooper, noted burlesque producer.

"The Big Jamboree" is presented in two acts and nine scenes, all devoted to the grotesque and eccentric antics of Frank Hunter, famous comedian, and a score of other entertainers and fun makers. A versatile array of the country's best vaudevillians are introduced during the performance and the scenic effects are gorgeous. Seldom does a burlesque company present costumes as rich and colorful as those worn by "The Big Jamboree" players.

Supporting Frank Hunter are many popular players including Frank X. Silk, Lelia Hoard, Jack Gibson, Castleton Four, Helen Andrews, Anna Thornton, Mildred Holmes. The show was written by William K. Wells and the music is by Hughey Schubert, and Raymond B. Perse has staged the dancing and ensemble numbers.

"CLARENCE" BY STOCK COMPANY

"Clarence," the comedy of American family life which Booth Tarkington wrote in one of his happiest veins of humor, will be presented at the St. James Theatre during the coming week by the clever players of the new Boston Stock Company.

The highly favorable reviews which this play received in New York emphasized the clean entertainment it afforded theatregoers and the aptness with which it touched upon problems of family temperament which are to be found in greater or less degree in many American households of the present day.

Mr. Harkington wove rich comedy, occasional satire and a highly amusing element of mystery into his play all at the same time. The comedy abounds in abundant opportunity for the varied talents of the new stock company organization which Director W. C. Masson has assembled for the pleasure of Boston patrons of the drama.

The title role will be taken by Walter Gilbert. Leona Powers will play the part of the governess, with Viola Roach as Mrs. Wheeler, Ethel Mulholland as Cora, the daughter; Mark Kent as Mr. Wheeler, and the others of the company assuming remaining roles.

REVUE HEADS BILL AT KEITH'S

Harry Carroll's new revue, "Varieties of 1921," will be the headline act at B. F. Keith's Theatre beginning Monday. Carroll, well known to vaudeville patrons as a composer of exceptionally fine miniature musical comedies, and a comedian of rare ability, has turned out a timely, amusing and melodious revue, according to advanced information.

Grace Fisher, a comely miss, the Bennett Sisters, twins of proven ability; Harry Laughlin, a first-class comique, and six dashing demoiselles, billed as "Six Slick Chicks," form the cast for the revue.

CROOK PLAY FOR STOCK COMPANY

"Smooth as Silk," Willard Mack's sensational crook play, which ran at the Belasco, New York theatres for the season, is the selection for the second week of the new season of the Somerville Players, beginning with the usual Monday matinee. "Smooth as Silk" is concerned with the adventures of Silk Mullane, a gentleman thief. He and his faithful henchman have been in an affair on a ten-year stretch and with the opening of the play have come home to their molls.

In addition the author has interwoven a romance of absorbing appeal. The leading characters in "Smooth as Silk" will be handled by Arthur Howard and Enid Markey, both comfortably established as Somerville's leading man and leading lady, respectively.

DOUG BLEW HIS WHOLE ROLL

Spent a Cold Million to Make "Three Musketeers" Film Sensation

For the first time since he became a screen actor, Douglas Fairbanks spent a cold million dollars in a effort to make "The Three Musketeers," which has proven to be the film sensation of the picture world, and which was adapted by Edward Knoblock from Alexander Dumas' famous novel, and directed by Fred Niblo. Never, before in the history of the motion picture industry was a photoplay introduced on so lavish a scale as was this forthcoming Fairbanks offering. Nearly a hundred thousand dollars was spent on costumes alone, and more than half that amount was expended in the building of exterior sets, not counting the ship and the pier which cost a small fortune besides. The payroll for the stars and players was more than three times as heavy for this picture as it was on any previous Fairbanks film, owing to the fact that it was the aim of the star-producer to get the best talent available, regardless of cost. More women play with Doug in important roles in "The Three Musketeers" than ever before appeared with him in any feature. Marguerite De La Motte, Mary MacLaren and Barbara La Marr, all stars in their own right, who are among the highest paid photoplayers on the screen, take the leading parts. All told, there are one hundred and sixteen persons in the cast, not counting the extras, and the weekly payroll for "The Three Musketeers" reached the staggering figure of over $50,000 a week. Douglas Fairbanks will present "The Three Musketeers" for an indefinite engagement at the Selwyn Theatre, opening Monday night, September 12. The premiere performance will be attended by Douglas Fairbanks in person, accompanied by his popular and charming wife, Mary Pickford.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE

All is in readiness at the Boston Opera House for the advent of "Mecca," the musical extravaganza of the Orient, said to be the largest and most beautiful theatrical attraction ever staged in the history of the world, which F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest will present before Boston audiences for an engagement of two weeks beginning Monday night. "Mecca" was transported the past week to Boston from New York in two special trains of fourteen baggage cars, and a large force of carpenters, electricians and mechanics have been working ever since to assemble the huge production for its first showing here.

The coming of this gigantic and colossal attraction, in eleven scenes, presented by a company of more than 300 players, is certainly one of the most important events of the local theatrical season. Eminent critics who saw "Mecca" during its sensational run at the Century Theatre, New York, declare that it is the crowning stage achievement of many decades, and represents the highest artistic and spectacular triumph of this day and generation.

"Mecca" is a romance of the Far East, the Orient of a thousand years ago, written by the celebrated author of "Chu Chin Chow," Oscar Asche. Who is now getting ready the English production of this wonderful extravaganza to be revealed within a few weeks at His Majesty's Theatre, London. The music is by Percy Fletcher; the costumes were designed by Percy Anderson of London and Leon Rakst of Paris; the scenery is from the London studios of the famous Harker Brothers; Michel Fokine, who put on "The Blue Bird" in London, staged the production, "Oriental" coloring, staging, costuming and musical setting have been highly praised; but the sensational ballets and Bacchanal devised and staged by the incomparable Michel Fokine, creator of the Ballet Russe, stand out as the culminating triumph of his genius.

'THE THREE MUSKETEERS'

The super photoplay, "The Three Musketeers," the big picture sensation and feature attraction of the popular actor in the romantic, adventurous role of D'Artagnan, will open at the Selwyn, formerly the Park Square Theatre, at 2:30 Sunday evening. The box office will be open all day thereafter. On Sunday night, the Monday matinee and on Monday night, Douglas Fairbanks, accompanied by his popular wife, Mary Pickford, will appear in person at the Selwyn Theatre, to greet their friends and well-wishers. No more pretentious photoplay has ever been presented on the screen than the Fairbanks version of Dumas' most popular novel, "The Three Musketeers," which comes for an indefinite engagement at the Selwyn Theatre, beginning Sunday night, September 11, with matinees daily thereafter. As the scenes of the picture opening after another is moulded upon the startled gaze of the audience. Some of the most interesting results ever obtained with a motion picture camera are shown in the picture. There are several episodes where stereoscopic effects are flashed on the sheet and the lighting at all times is startling in beauty and originality. Arthur Edeson, who photographed the production has made it a true artist. The colorful costumes and the picturesque settings add much to the beauty of the picture, and again Fairbanks has proved himself the master of choosing the very best players obtainable.

WALTHAM FAIR

Vaudeville will have a prominent place at the Waltham Fair, beginning September 26, at the Central Park Arena, where it is presented at that event by some of the best vaudeville people in the country.

Fourteen big acts, selected for their excellence by one of the best booking agencies in vaudeville, have been picked to entertain the patrons of the fair.

Tilley and John Baldwin—the former the champion cowgirl in the world, who won the gold medal at the Calgary Rodeo in their almost unbelievable riding act, will head the bill.

Among the other acts which will be seen is a novelty entitled "Jazz," the best known pony act in America, who closes his entertainment with a reception to the children; the Jolly Sailors, in a bounding rope act; marvelous Melville, acrobat; the three St. Onges, in aerial acts; Zarita, the famous Cuban nightingale; Welch's troupe of the world's greatest racing whippets; Daniel Rube McFadden, the famous trainer; Alfonzo, king of the high wires, and others.

McISAAC says that

MITZI in "Lady Billy" has her greatest role. It is an operetta of great charm, with a lovely score and a fine singing cast. Tremont.

FRANK TINNEY in "Tickle Me." The show sounds like the title, girls in the least the law allows, while Tinney, both black face and white face, is funnier than ever before. Shubert.

"DEAR ME," the cheerful comedy in which Hale Hamilton and Grace LaRue are starring at the Hollis, announces its last week.

"FOUR HORSEMEN" at the Globe continues its phenomenal run. The picture has been seen half a dozen times by many people.

"OVER THE HILL" at Tremont Temple is a sweet and sentimental film of mother love, beautifully performed and very popular.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS' FILM SENSATION

A generation ago Boston did not have much more than half the population that it has at present and the hundreds of thousands of music loving foreigners who are now in our midst had not begun to come. For three or four years Henry W. Savage maintained an opera in English company at the Arlington and then, at the Castle Square, and enjoyed prosperity.

It is certain that our people understand opera better now than they did then. The photograph has made the principal airs of grand opera familiar to everyone. Therefore all that is necessary is perseverance and a high standard of excellence to draw the public in increasing numbers.

On the other hand the phonograph supplies the public with musical standards they didn't have thirty years ago. A phonograph record of Galli Curci or Caruso record of a big aria will not be satisfied with bad singing of the same aria on the operatic performance.

The Boston Society of Singers will have to be good singers or they won't become popular.

New Opera Every Night

Fortune Gallo was in Boston last week consulting with his representatives regarding the fortnight of opera to be given by his San Carlo Opera company in December. It seems that early subscriptions have been encouraging and Gallo proposes to bring over the best troupe he can get together. In this company will be Maria Rappold, Anna Fitzhal and Esther Ferrabini. The leading dancer will be Sylvia Toli. Among the conductors will be Henry Hadley, Chalmers Clifton and Gaetano Merola.

Gallo will give sixteen different operas in sixteen performances, a prodigious feat for any opera troupe.

"WHIRL" DUE AT WILBUR IN WEEK

Winter Garden Show Includes Pleasing Array of Artists in Large Cast

After a postponement of two weeks, due to the demand for its retention at the New York Winter Garden, "The Whirl of New York" will positively begin its Boston engagement at the Wilbur Theatre on Monday evening, September 19.

"The Whirl of New York" will include in the personnel of its cast in Boston one of the most pleasing arrays of theatrical and musical talent seen in this city in some time. Heading the list of favorites of international reputation is Dorothy Ward, Shaunn Glenville, Kyra, J. Harold Murray, the Purcella Brothers, Roy Cummings, Teddy Webb, Nancy Gibbs, Joe Kaus, Rosie Green and Irene Shaw. Of the above Miss Ward, Miss Gibbs and Mr. Glenville are English musical comedy favorites while the balance are well-known American stars.

"The Whirl of New York" is the first New York Winter Garden attraction to depart from the revue and extravaganza. It is really an elaborated musical comedy possessing a genuine plot. It is in seven scenes and two acts with a company that numbers over 100 people. Its story is based upon the tremendously popular musical comedy success of some years ago, "The Belle of New York," from whose fascinating musical score many of the song hits have been taken. To these have been added a score or more of up-to-the minute melodies.

SOUSA'S BAND

One of the happiest of the added attractions of this season's concerts of Sousa's Band, which comes to Symphony Hall a week from Sunday, is the brilliant staff of vocal and instrumental soloists now performing in the different programs provided by the March King.

Precious and memorable examples of great compositions for the harp now enrich the library of Sousa's Band which has Miss Winifred Bambrick, foremost virtuoso of that beloved instrument, as solo harpist. John Dolan, cornet virtuoso, stands at the forefront of the great soloists of that instrument. Ellis McDermott, an artist of demonstrated superiority, is the solo flutist of the famous band; George C. Carey, the xylophonist expert, adds novelty and distinction to many performances; Miss Mary Baker, an artist-singer of high attainments, is the soprano soloist, and Miss Florence Hardeman, the violinist, completes the roster of eminent soloists now appearing under the baton of the March King.

The music-loving public has come to look forward with eager expectancy to the solo features which Lieutenant Sousa is constantly adding to the always rich and diversified program of stirring music.

"THE WREN"

A new play by Booth Tarkington is an attraction in itself, but when you add one of the most delightful and charming young actresses of the day, Helen Hayes, it is really in the nature of an event. On Monday night, September 19, at the Hollis Street Theatre, "The Wren," Mr. Tarkington's latest comedy, with Miss Hayes in the leading role, will have its first presentation.

Miss Hayes has already endeared herself to lovers of the theatre with her charming, delightful impersonation of the sub-deb, "Bab," her dash, buoyancy and sparkle in this role still lingers pleasantly in one's memory.

George C. Tyler, the producer in association with A. L. Erlanger, has provided an artistic stage setting and a company of superior qualifications.

George Fawcett, who has been about from the speaking stage for a number of years returns to create the role of an old Maine sea captain.

Leslie Howard, a young English actor who scored a signal success as the friend of the Prince in "Just Suppose," Sam Read, who will be pleasantly remembered by his excellent characterization in "Turn to the Right."

LIONEL BARRYMORE IN "THE CLAW"

Arthur Hopkins will present Lionel Barrymore in "The Claw" at the Plymouth Theatre for two weeks only, beginning Monday, September 19. This will be the first performance in America of Henri Bernstein's play, "La Griffe," which set Paris by the ears when produced there years ago by Lucien Guitry. Mr. Barrymore, of course, takes the Guitry role of Corfelon, a part which has become a monument to Guitry's fame in France, and may well serve Lionel Barrymore as fairly in America. He will be supported by some notable players, including Irene Fenwick, Doris Rankin, Charles Kennedy and E. J. Ballantine.

BRITISH AVIATOR TO TRY OUT PLANE THAT CAN WORK WONDERS

BRIDGE ISN'T BROOKLYN'S ONLY ATTRACTION! These two sisters, Madge Merritt (left) and Victoria, won second and third prizes in Brighton Beach bathing beauty contest. They live in Brooklyn. Just imagine what a pip the first place winner must have been, and what a good time those judges have of it. (Int.)

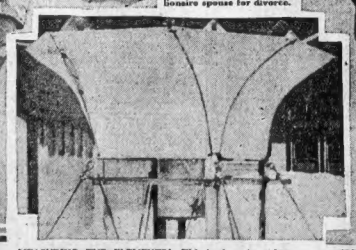
DIVING FIGHTERS, ATTENTION! Down in Cuba they have rings over the water, so that the fans can wear their bathing suits and keep cool. Also gives referee a chance to toss the battlers into the wet if he thinks they're stalling. Handy scheme for that Wilson-Downey bout, from what we read. (W. W.)

SONGBIRD FOR CHICAGO! Mlle. Jeanne Schneider, who is French, despite the given name, will warble for the Windy City Opera Co. Centralio discovered by Mary Garden in Paris. (U. & U.)

THEY'RE MAKING THEM NIFTIER ALL THE TIME! The hats, as well as the models. This one, the hat, has a huge osprey falling rather unconventionally over the smartly drooping brim. Varnished cloth adds additional lustre to the test ensemble, which is being generally worn on the Fall bonnets.

AT THE HORSE SHOW! Irish villagers flock in throngs to the Dublin exhibit now that things are peaceful. Don't dress for it quite the way they do over here. (W. W.)

HUBBY TOOK FURNITURE for his affinity, claims Mrs. Arthur Gale Johnson, who is suing millionaire spouse for divorce.



NO VETO IN SIGHT! Jewell O'Malley and Aileen Faye are wearing their knicker suits on a ten-day hike to Washington to get Pres. Harding's approval of what they think the most sensible style of draperies. Started from New York. Here our vote. (Int.)

HOWARD'S SOME PICKER! Artist Christy selected Virginia Lee to represent New York in Atlantic City beauty carnival. Virgie's a blue-eyed blonde. (Int.)

WON AERIAL DERBY. so Frank Courtney has been awarded honor of making first flight in secret British plane, which vices perpendicularly and does other startling things. (W. W.)

MOTORLESS PLANING! They're doing it successfully in Germany. Get farther than the riders in the motorless autos you see along the roadsides. (W. W.)

MEASURING THE ELEMENTS! This is the rain and snow gauge the government uses at Blue Canyon, Cal., to get the storm dope. Set up in the region of the country's heaviest snowfall. It's a Marvin Shielded Gauge, if you want to know. (Int.)

NOTHING OBJECTIONABLE HERE! In fact this bathing creation in black and white would please the ultra fastidious. More entrancing than scantier styles, too. From Paris. (W. W.)

PAPOOSE LIKE 'UM! Not an Indian, but an English mother, however, who packs baby in dad's old haversack while she picks hops at Peddock Wood. (W. W.)

BRUIN TRAFFIC COP! Stops autos in Yellowstone and demands candy before he lets 'em go. Gets it, too, for he knows he's big enough to put a bad dent in any radiator that whacked him. Also bushes all his victims, like any traffic officer. (W. W.)

MAYOR'S ACTION ASSURES HUGE BUILDING PLAN

Ten Million Dollar Project in Park Square Gets Official Recognition

Plans for a $6,000,000 office building, & $5,000,000 hotel to hold 1,000 rooms, and a big new railroad station, all in the Park square district, today took on a new impetus with the announcement that Mayor Peters has formally accepted the Legislative act providing for the Stuart and Eliot streets improvements.

William J. McDonald, president of the Park Square Trust, is authority for the statement that plans for the hotel and office buildings are already under way, and a prominent city official, who requested that his name be withheld, declared that the acceptance of the Stuart street act is the forerunner of the railroad station.

According to this official the property owned by the New Haven railroad bounded by Huntington avenue, Boylston street, Exeter street, and Massachusetts avenue is to be utilized as the site for the coming terminals.

He also declared that this would mean the electrification of all steam railroads entering Boston, and the abandonment of the South Station and the construction of a tunnel between the new station and the North Station.

URGED FOR SOME TIME.

He declared that for some time there has been much quiet agitation under way for this improvement in the traffic arrangements of the city. He admitted that it might be some time before the proposed changes would be undertaken.

McDonald, who has been pushing the Stuart street improvement scheme for months, declared it was the biggest business and public improvement in more than a decade.

"The city should go ahead with this work without a second's unnecessary delay," he said.

READY TO BUILD.

"The Park Square Trust is interested in the realty improvements of that district, and our plans have been complete since last Spring. Just as soon as the city does the preliminary work of widening the street we are prepared to begin the work of building.

"The plans for the largest office building outside of New York city are complete. It will be on the style of the new Equitable Building in New York, and is to be ten stories high and equipped with all possible modern office conveniences. It is to cost complete about $6,000,000.

"Now for what else. We also have completed plans for a huge 1,000-room hotel at a cost of $5,000,000 to $6,000,000. This also will be thoroughly modern and elaborately equipped.

"In addition to these two buildings we are planning the construction of other buildings that will cost in aggregate of $4,000,000.

"There are other buildings also projected, but as yet the plans for them have not taken definite shape and I do not feel at liberty to speak of them now.

"But I can say, that when Stuart street improvement work is completed it is going to be one of the most important and attractive thoroughfares in the city."

Arthur Russell, vice-president of the New Haven Railroad, declared today that his company has three large parcels of land on Stuart street, and that these will "be used when the improvement is completed."

PLANS CALL FOR $10,000,000.

The space next to the Selwyn Park Square Theatre is to be sold to a company which plans the construction of a new hotel. It is said that the plans for this call for the expenditure of more than $10,000,000, and that it will be one of the most ornate hotel decorative buildings in New England, as well as one of the largest hotels in this part of the country.

The Durant's Women's Club building which is to be constructed at a cost of approximately $1,000,000 will be located in this neighborhood as well. Options are held on property near the corner of Tremont and Eliot street by corporations planning the construction of theatres.

The actual physical work of tearing down the houses and beginning the improvements will be pushed through by the city officials with no delay.

It is in the hands of the Public Works Department and it has been announced that the plans are virtually complete and that the actual work will begin as soon as the necessary advertisements for bids can be made.

It is estimated that the work this Winter will give employment to hundreds of the city's unemployed and aid materially in solving that problem in Boston.

NEW BEDFORD AVENUE IS NAMED FOR ASHLEY

New Bedford, Sept. 10.—Bowditch street, the city's recently completed boulevard which connects with the road to Boston, was crossed Ashley avenue by a unanimous vote of the Common Council, in honor of Mayor Charles S. Ashley, who retires from political life next January after having been head of the city government for twenty-three years.

Many Notables at Two Lenox Weddings Today

By BETTY ALDEN

Lenox, Sept. 10.—Two weddings—one at Stockbridge this noon and one in Lenox—this afternoon brought to the Berkshires the greatest display of wealth and fashion in a generation. The combined fortunes of four families is close to $100,000,000. The United States army, the treasury and State departments were represented, and Mayor Andrew J. Peters of Boston was an usher at the marriage of Miss Louise Delano to Colonel Sherwood Alfred Cheney in the Stockbridge Congregational church this noon.

The bride is the daughter of Frederic Adrian Delano, former president of the Wabash railroad, and Mrs. Delano, now of Washington, D. C. She is thirty years old, a tall handsome brunette.

Rev. William Wallace Fenn, dean of Harvard Divinity School, officiated. Miss Delano's attendants were her sister, Mrs. Alexander Galt Grant of Boston, and little Irene M. Robbins, aged six, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins of Washington. Colonel Cheney's best man was Colonel Halsted Dorsey, U. S. A. Among the ushers, besides Mayor Peters, were Eliot Wadsworth, assistant secretary of the treasury; Basil Miles and Leland Harrison, who are in the State Department. The bride wore white chiffon embroidered in pearls with cloth of silver train three and one-half yards long. Her flower girl wore a gown of organdy embroidery sent over from Paris by her grandmother, Mme. Casimir de Bruyn.

The brilliant reception was held at the Nunnery, Miss Virginia Sedgwick's villa, leased by the Delano family for the season.

Among the guests were Mrs. John Nicholas Brown and son, John Nicholas Brown, Jr. James Roosevelt, Mrs. Price Collier, Mr. and Mrs. Owen Johnson, Mrs. Joseph H. Choate, Miss Mabel Choate, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Chester French, Mrs. Frederick S. Coolidge, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Astor Bristed, Mrs. J. Malcolm Forbes.

Colonel Cheney, West Point, 1897, who is a member of the noted heavy family of South Manchester, Ct., silk manufacturers, is forty-seven years old. He has just been appointed military attache to the American embassy at Pekin, China and they are to sail in November.

Rev. Endicott Peabody of Groton and Rev. Latta Griswold of Lenox officiated at the marriage of Miss Elsie Parsons to Morehead Patterson in Trinity Episcopal Church this afternoon at 4 o'clock. The bride is a daughter of Herbert Parsons, former Republican leader of New York County, and a granddaughter of Henry Clews, the banker. Her paternal grandfather was John E. Parsons, who organized the sugar trust of that name ago. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus D. Patterson of New York. His father made millions in tobacco.

The chancel of the church, decorated with campanula pyramidalis, white gladioli and white dahlias, presented a floral scene of great beauty.

Four young society women attended the bride. They were Miss Eunice Jeanes, Miss Dorothy Dulles, and the Florence J. Loew and Miss Evelyn Loew of New York. Miss Florence Loew of New York was Mr. Patterson's best man, and among the twelve ushers were William Rhinelander Stewart, Jr., Blake L. Lawrence, Amory S. Carhart, Jr., A. Foster Schermerhorn and F. Thayer Hoadley.

The bride wore a gown of white satin, duchesse lace, a present from Worth in Paris. It is said to have cost $5,000. Her bridesmaids were in pink chiffon with hats of pink velvet and pink ostrich feathers.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clews, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Iselin, Mr. and Mrs. Goodhue Livingston, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Vanderbilt, Henry White, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Gallatin, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Winsor, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Haworth Busk, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Wolcott Griswold.

The reception was held at Stonover, the magnificent estate of Miss Mary Parsons, the bride's aunts, which was originally the country place of her grandfather, John E. Parsons. Dancing was dancing on the terraces and lawn.

Mr. Patterson graduated from Yale in 1920, went to Oxford for a year and is to enter Harvard Law School the Fall. They are to live in Cambridge. He is a member of the A. D. fraternity and she is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma.

Over 4,000 invitations were issued for the two weddings and presents of great value have been arriving by every mail and express for two weeks. Extra guards were placed about the Nunnery and Stonover, where they have been on view to friends.

Nearer to Boston, and of great interest to Boston's socially elect, was the wedding of Miss Mary E. Hodges and Fidele Koenig, which took place this afternoon after 4 o'clock in St. John's Church, Beverly Farms, where the pastor of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Hodges of Brookline have a summer home.

The bride had chosen as her attendants Miss Joan Fay, stepsister of the groom, as maid of honor; also Miss Joycelyn Parker, Miss Anita Lee, Mrs. J. Robertson Ward and Mrs. Roger W. Converse (Barbara Ward), all of Boston; Miss Elizabeth Forrest of Kansas City, Mo., and Miss Mary Morvel of Wilmington, Del. Little Miss Anstiss Boyden will be flower girl.

Mr. Koenig, who is the son of Mrs. Joseph S. Fay of Commonwealth avenue had selected Mr. Reginald Foster Mc. Kisco, N. Y., to be his best man, and the ushers were Messrs. Malcom Bradlee, Sargent Gibson of N. Y., C. A. Griscom of Philadelphia, Charles Cottrell of Westerly, R.I., and Harold Flanagan of Chicago. With the exception of Mr. Hodges, brother of the bride, all are classmates of Mr. Koenig's at St. Mark's "prep" school. The groom is still a student at Harvard, a member of the class of '22.

Miss Jocelyn Parker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Parker of Cambridge, is one of the bridesmaids selected by Miss Mary E. Hodges of Brookline and Beverly Farms, whose wedding to Mr. Fidele Koening, son of Mrs. Joseph S. Fay of Commonwealth avenue, took place this afternoon at Beverly Farms.

JAPS GIVE CHINA PLAN TO QUIT SHANTUNG

Terms Outlined in Notes to Pekin, Great Britain and United States

By International News Service.

Tokio, Sept. 10.—Japan has sent a note to China outlining the basis and conditions upon which Japan will withdraw from the Shantung peninsula.

The Japanese government also has sent notes to the United States and Great Britain explaining the terms upon which Japan promised to leave the Shantung peninsula.

Despite protests from a section of the public, the Japanese government is going ahead with its efforts to settle the Yap Island, Shantung and Siberian issues before the disarmament and Far East conference opens in Washington in November. Those who are opposed to a preliminary agreement contend that all matters should be left to President Harding's conference, when the great powers of the world will be represented.

Many Japanese newspapers treat the subject of a preliminary conference with pessimism. They take the view that the questions in dispute are "too troublesome" to attempt to solve prior to the general conference. Japan and Great Britain are opposed on the subject of a prior meeting, the latter country insisting it should take place.

In the opinion of many the Japanese delegation to Washington should be headed by Admiral Kato, Japanese Minister of Marine. It is understood the choice lies between Admiral Kato and Count Uchida, the foreign minister.

JURORS CAN NOW BE EXEMPTED BY JUDGE

New Law Allows Discretion in Cases Where Serious Predicament Is Faced

Exemption from jury duty in the discretion of the court is permissible under a new law, passed by the Legislature at the last session and which went into effect on Tuesday of this week.

The law reads: "The presiding justice at a sitting of the court, with juries may, in his discretion, postpone the whole or any part of the time of service of a juror to a later day during the same or a subsequent sitting; and the presiding justice may thereupon make an order that such juror whose term of service is so postponed to a certain day, shall attend at the opening of the court on that day, and thereafter, until he is discharged from service. Any such juror whose term of service or part thereof is postponed shall be required to serve for a greater number of days than he would have been required to serve if such postponement had not been granted."

The law was passed as the result of agitation for amendment of the law relating to jury duty, so that men who would be seriously hampered in their business or professional affairs by continuous attendance upon a jury for which they might be impanelled might be exempted.

In the arguments for the legislation before the General Court it was brought out that many men had lost their positions through being forced to serve upon juries; others had been brought almost to bankruptcy by enforced neglect of their affairs; and others, such as traveling men, had lost considerable income by being forced to abandon business trips.

Under the new law, if a person who is called to serve upon a jury finds himself in a serious predicament, he may present his case to the judge who is presiding at the jury session, and if such court deems the conditions warrant, the juror may be exempted from service on such day or days during the session as the presiding justice may deem advisable.

NEWSPAPERS IN RUSSIA ARE RARITIES

Only Way Events Are Told to the People Is by Official Bulletins Posted on Walls

By LOUISE BRYANT,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

It has been a long time now since any Russian sat at breakfast buried behind his daily newspaper. The only way he can get any idea of the news is to go out on the street and read the papers posted on the walls.

And the papers so posted are really nothing but official bulletins. Not a single human interest story ever appears! Murder, scandal, society, baseball, humorous cartoons simply have no place.

Theatre notices appear, but an actress might be as great as Duse, she might sue her husband for divorce, or shoot him because she is jealous and she will not get a line. If a lot of people die of typhus or of hunger or cold, there will be a short paragraph of statistics—nothing more.

News from the front and developments of relations with foreign countries are the only subjects that are given space, and curious and inconsistent and typically Russian is the fact that in the official sheet, called by the grace of the Soviets daily newspapers, always appears poetry.

This poetry is usually the verse of some soldier or peasant about some burning question of the day.

In Moscow there are three papers, the Pravda, Isvestia and the Economy Magazine. This last is a weekly and is only for use in the offices. Government offices are also supplied with the dailies. All these are Bolshevik papers.

All opposition papers were suppressed about the time of the terror. I heard of one or two Menshevik papers being published legally but I did not see any. There are a number of magazines, but owing to the great shortage of paper these do not appear periodically. I saw several very creditable theatre magazines and a number of Red army papers.

Russian newspapers are not very interesting to look at or exciting to read. There isn't a single advertisement and there are always statements from the various government departments and political speeches and political arguments.

In the provinces there are no daily papers. Local papers are printed whenever there is enough material. Decrees are posted on the walls and bulletins are sent to the main cities and villages.

In Petrograd most of the soldiers could not read, but there were schools back of the lines and hundreds of actual schools so that the majority can read today, but it is no uncommon sight to see one soldier reading to a crowd and it is common to see one peasant reading to other peasants.

Among the newspapers may be noted Perenc Vencey, the Hungarian violinist, a pupil of the great Joachim. Paul Kochanski, a new Russian violinist, will be a powerful performer. Also Alexander Siloti, the pianist who was a pupil of Liszt and of Nicolai Rubenstein. Another remarkable pianist was Ernst Dahnanyi. Twenty-one years ago he played with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as a very young man. Since then his fame has spread throughout the old world. Another Hungarian pianist is Erwin Nyiregyhazi, whose amazing technique has stunned audiences in New York and elsewhere. A new soprano is Nina Koshetz from the Russian opera houses, who goes to the Chicago opera this season.

SIMMONS SALVAGE SHOP PLANS FOR BUSY SEASON

With the opening of many town houses in September and October the Simmons College Salvage Shop at No. 87 Newbury street is looking forward to a prosperous Autumn. Despite the hot weather and the fact that most of the committee from Boston, trade has kept up in a most satisfactory way. Now that many of the committee are back in town activity at the Shop is picking up and brisker business is being planned for the near future: September 16, furniture; September 21, velvet hats; September 23, china, linens and framed pictures with odds and ends of furniture; October 4, gas and electric appliances; October 11, silver and jewelry. The Salvage Shop, as the alumnae headquarters during the campaign for $1,000,000 in October, will be a busy place.

Arrangements for the collection of donated goods as were in force last Spring are again effective, and a telephone call to Back Bay 54219 will bring a truck to transport the donations.

SOLOISTS FOR SYMPHONY ANNOUNCED

Several Great Artists as Well as Well Known Stars Will Sing Here

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, about to begin its forty-first season, is ready with its list of soloists. The appearance of a guest conductor for one pair of concerts is a matter of comment, particularly when the guest is Vincent D'Indy, the great French composer.

The soloists this season include not only a number of well-known stars but several great artists from Europe who have yet to make their reputations in America. The list includes Louise Homer, contralto; Emilio de Gogorza, baritone; Josef Hofmann, pianist; Olga Samaroff, pianist; Yolanda Mero, pianist, all prominent artists.

Among the newcomers may be noted Perenc Vencey, the Hungarian violinist, a pupil of the great Joachim. Paul Kochanski, a new Russian violinist, will be a powerful performer. Also Alexander Siloti, the pianist who was a pupil of Liszt and of Nicolai Rubenstein. Another remarkable pianist was Ernst Dahnanyi. SMOOT TO PUT SALES TAX UP TO SENATE

Utah Senator to Press Separate Bill Embodying Plan

By International News Service.

Washington, Sept. 10.—The Senate probably will be given an opportunity to say "yes" or "no" on the sales tax when it tackles revenue revision, Senator Smoot, Republican, of Utah, a member of the Senate Finance Committee, indicated today.

It is Smoot's purpose to offer a separate bill, embodying his sales tax plan as a substitute for the administration tax bill. Other Republican committee members will unite in accordance with Secretary Mellon's suggestions.

Smoot will first offer his bill in committee after the administration bill is completed. It is not anticipated that Senator Pepper of Pennsylvania and other Republican Senators backing the administration's tax program will accept the Smoot bill as a substitute for their own.

Smoot will then offer his bill in the Senate after the Mellon-Penrose bill is reported. Such a move would probably bring the sales tax issue to a direct test of senatorial support or opposition. That a fight over the sales tax in the Senate is inevitable is the opinion of Senators on both sides.

At present administration influences are working against the Smoot plan, but powerful business is in its support and it may muster more votes if forced to a showdown in the Senate, than it apparently commands now.

PASTOR'S WRITS OF EJECTMENT BEFORE COURT

Formal Return Made on Papers Brought Against Gulick's Brookline Tenants

Formal return of the writs of ejectment sought by Rev. Edward L. Gulick, Brookline pastor, against four of his tenants was made in Brookline Court today. No answers have been filed by any of the defendants.

Although the writs were returned today, they are not set to come up for trial until Tuesday, Daniel A. Rollins, an associate justice of the Brookline Court, who is Rev. Mr. Gulick's counsel, said he expected the case would be continued then.

The defendants, it became known, have secured an attorney and will go to the Dedham Superior Court Monday when the East Indies and a tense, stirring drama which evolves around the racial dividing line between Oriental and Occidental restraining the minister from prosecuting his ejectment suits on the ground that he did not serve them with the proper notices of expiration of their lease.

It is believed Gulick's suits will not be heard until the injunction proceedings have been disposed of.

JAMES L. KNOX AWARDED DIVORCE; NOT HIS WIFE

Though an error the Boston American yesterday, printed a story to the effect that Mrs. Florence Caroline Moll Knox had been granted a divorce from her husband, James L. Knox, former Harvard football coach. The divorce was granted on the charge of intoxication, according to the story. The Boston American has since learned that the divorce was granted to Mr. Knox who secured it on the grounds of intoxication, and takes this opportunity of correcting the statement of yesterday. Mr. Knox was granted divorce in the Norfolk County Superior Court at Dedham.

COACH FISHER WILL FIND IT DIFFICULT TO FILL HORWEEN'S PLACE

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

Although little or no comment has developed on the issue, one of the most important tasks confronting Head Coach Bob Fisher of Harvard this season is that of developing a man to fill Arnie Horween's shoes.

The fact that four, and possibly five, first string linemen were not to return for the 1921 season, caused much discussion on the proportions of Coach Fisher's line-building job, and the absence of Arnie seemed sort of lost in the shuffle.

* * *

But they don't make football men of Arnie Horween's type very often, and they are vastly important to a well-rounded football machine.

* * *

Arnie Horween weighed 205 pounds and was extremely fast for a man of his ounces, and Arnie Horween could do a whole lot of football things and do them excellently. He was the sort of a chap who seemed always there in a pinch, and when a person is "there" with all the stuff Arnie possessed that person is a whole of an asset.

* * *

Nominally, when Harvard was on the offense, Arnie was the No. 1 back, the feller that clears the way for the man carrying the ball and who, incidentally, has much to do with starting the ball-carrier on long, cheer-rewarded runs, but himself gets little credit for so doing. When, however, they needed a yard or two, or three, or four, and the opposing tackles or ends seemed to be fathoming Harvard drives at the flanks, they'd give Arnie the ball to punch through the middle of the line, and Arnie did it with great regularity and to the complete satisfaction of Harvard supporters.

* * *

When Harvard was on the defense, Arnie was equally important. He had a nose for the ball and an uncanny ability at sizing up opposing plays, and when Arnie catapulated those more-than-200-pounds upon a ball-carrier's backfield man the latter just naturally came to the ground sincerely hoping he had been injured so badly he would be taken to the sideliners while some other chap was allowed to try to get by the husky Harvard fullback.

* * *

At dropkicking Arnie didn't compare with others in practice, but when it came to a game in which the others were failing to register field goals, they used to hand the ball to Arnie and he'd deliver. And when injury, or other causes, found Harvard weak at centre, Arnie would fill the pivot berth and fill it like an experienced hand.

Thus it is that Coach Fisher's tasks this season are not confined to the developing of linemen.

The Crimson mentor may find among his 300 candidates a playboy of Arnie's type, but at least he comes to him with that reputation, and, in the event he is found or developed, a somewhat altered system of attack may be required, one with a more liberal assortment of forward passes, the threat of which will open the opposing line wide and enable a smaller and less efficient line plunger to take advantage of such openings.

* * *

The question of Jim Tolbert's return to varsity football is still unsettled at Cambridge. The husky Oklahoman, who played a fine game at guard last year, and who was elected captain of the team for this college year, has not been given up by Coach Fisher. Last reports had it that he would enter Law

Opening Kick of the Football Season

Dorchester is right up near the top when it comes to speed in sports. With the baseball season still going on high the boys in the Milton Lower Mills district have jumped right from the diamond onto the gridiron as shown by the following challenge:

The B. L. M. A. C. would like to arrange football games with any team averaging 126-30 pounds. The team will be greatly strengthened by Farrington and Hall, both star amateur players. Write to C. J. Farrington, No. 113 River street, Mattapan.

School this Fall and play no more football, but his return to the gridiron is so earnestly desired by the football powers that he may be found flashing the Crimson centre within a week or two.

Bob Fowler Becomes Williams Trainer

There will be a Crimson tinge to the Williams Purple this season, according to present indications, for an all-Harvard combination of coaches and trainers take up their duties at Williamstown next week.

Percy Wendell, the new head coach, already is on the job, and "Doug" Lawson, son of Tom Lawson of "Frenzied Finance" fame, has been signed as line coach, while Dick Lewis and, later on, Frank O'Brien will aid in training the ends, and Billy Bowles will have similar duties with the quarterback candidates.

And to make the affair entirely Harvard, Bob Fowler, who formerly served under Percy Donovan, the Crimson trainer, and later trained the B. C. team coached by Brickley, has been engaged to look after the condition of the football men during the season.

All "D" Men on Hand at Dartmouth

"Hunk" Cavanaugh, former Allen School lineman and last year a star on the Dartmouth Freshman Team, may eliminate a considerable portion of Coach Jack Cannell's worries in rebuilding the Dartmouth team for the season.

The declaring ineligible of Gus Sonnenberg, Dartmouth All American tackle, added to the loss of other varsity linemen through graduation, presented quite a problem to the new head coach at Hanover. The presence of Cavanaugh in fine condition, however, should mean that Sonnenberg's place will be capably filled.

All the "D" men eligible for this season are now reported with the squad—that number including Captain Jim Robertson, Burks, Eddie Lynch, Phil Throehle, Neldlinger, George Moore, Gordon and Strong. Ashenback, last season's guard, who is expected to be experienced and scholastic difficulties, may become eligible should he successfully engage in special examinations.

HARVARD CAPTAIN SHIFTS FROM END TO TACKLE

There was a lull in the Harvard football practice period today when the candidates for the eleven were advised to forget about the pigskin and go to their homes to rest over the week-end. In the interim the coaches of the team decided the men best qualified to be retained for further trial, and as a result the squad of one hundred will be cut to forty starting Monday.

The survivors will represent the varsity and after a slash or two more will be the squad from which the Yale team players are selected, and those who will be on the bench as subs when the Blue and Crimson mingle next November. The remainder will serve as the second team.

Captain Keith Kane, who has been laboring all week as an end, will start at tackle Monday, at least that seems to be the program at present. Yesterday in addition to working with the wings, he was taken in hand and drilled separately as a tackle. He was one of the regular tackles in 1919 and played the position against Oregon at Pasadena.

There were two additional coaches out yesterday. Henry Fanon, who aided Bob Sedgwick in coaching the tackles, and Don Wallace, who took on Eddie Mahan's great team. Fanon was substitute tackle last Fall, and is expected to help the varsity.

The squad worked for nearly one and a half hours yesterday, except that the linemen enjoyed somewhat shorter stay on the field. The ends were sent down under punts for the first time this Fall.

Kickers Jenkins, Fitts and Buell turned out some fine boots while the wings, however, had plenty of time to get under. Jack Crocker made several pretty catches in addition to figuring finely when the forward pass handling was under way. Tilden Crosby, the Newton boy, looked well also during the time Charley Coolidge led the wings in action.

Tackling was barred during the running down field work. Real tackling with the dummy starts Monday, although there has been some work with the saw-dust quarter this week, but only to satisfy the desire of the movie men. Tackling must be clean and damaging to the opposing player is a big asset in football, and Coach Fisher aims to have every member of the squad letter perfect in bringing down his man. There are no Eddie Casey's on this year's squad. The Natick boy never made a tackle while he was at Harvard that he had a way of ending into a play that stopped the action, instead of tackling, in fact, he wouldn't have been the star he was had he been forced to smash in under the heavy work of the squad.

George Owen will be in togs Monday. That is the first time at Cambridge. The clever all around back is in fine health and quite near his playing form of 1919, while acting counsellor on a boys' camp in New Hampshire. George gave one of his characteristic exhibitions of drop kicking yesterday, and unless he could stay for at least another year Cavanaugh's labor would have been in vain.

CONNELLEY AND DOWD REPORT FOR SQUAD

Valuable Men Among the New Players Out for the B. C. Eleven

The sixty-odd candidates for the Boston College football team were divided into four groups yesterday, each group having as instructor one of the four regulars. The early part of the afternoon was devoted to passing and signal practice. Coach Cavanaugh later took the line candidates and drilled them for a short while in getting fast starts. Cavanaugh puts stress on the necessity of his men accustoming themselves to starting with a snap and being able to shift their bodies in any direction without the slightest hesitation.

Five new men reported to the coach yesterday. Two of them, Dowd and Jim Connelley, are valuable men who were laid up last year on account of injuries. Dowd is a 175-pound tackle, who was for three years high interscholastic tackle of the Somerville High team. Jill luck seems to be following him, for he sprained his wrist in the first few minutes of practice.

Connelley strained his back in a scrimmage and has not played for two years. He weighs 189 pounds and will try to win a guard or a tackle position.

Skinner, an old Cambridge Latin man, reported with the backfield men. Skinner and 'Jockie' Murphy, another Cambridge Latin boy, were buddies in the Yankee Division. Each has plenty of fight and shapes up well as first-class material.

Another aspirant for the centre position appears in the person of Carl Dedinger from Boston College High. DeSimone has not yet had a chance to show his work, but possesses one of the requisites for a good centre, weight. Carl tips the scales at 175.

Although it is too early to make any conjectures about the possible makeup of the team, the work of Keahane and Smullin as tackles and Reardon at centre will be worth watching. Darling, the Minnesota backfield man, and Bill Keilliher, the regular halfback, continued to boot the ball in fine fashion.

Concerning Roderick, the great halfback of last season, there are new rumors every day. The fact is that he has not yet appeared at the Heights and nothing definite can be said about his return. If he returns, he will have Jimmy Linton as his side partner, thus making an unbeatable pair.

Coach Cavanaugh is still looking for a line coach. Cav can get plenty to assist him for one year, but does not want a man whom he cannot sign up for at least two years. Cavanaugh says that no matter how good a coach is, even if he knows more than he does, he will be valueless, because Cav's assistant must work according to Cav's ideas of building up a team. It would take a new assistant a year to thoroughly familiarize himself with the Cavanaugh system, and unless he could stay for at least another year Cavanaugh's labor would have been in vain.

Rickard Wrong In Wilson Attack

Tex Rickard seems somewhat severe in his criticism of Johnny Wilson and the champion's style of battling in his recent bout with Bryan Downey.

Wilson is no Jim Corbett for cleverness and no Stanley Ketchell for slam-bang battling, but he is the best there is in a class of second-rate fighters and Mr. Rickard cannot take his title from him.

The Charlestown boy was no stranger to Rickard. Wilson has fought for him before and must have shown enough to get another contract from the famous boxing promoter—and he will box again for Mr. Tex.

Rickard is peeved, but the real reason, if the truth was known, is not so much Wilson as the failure of the champion and his Cleveland rival to draw a bigger gate.

According to recent figures Mr. Rickard was "stung" good and proper, but as it would be unsportsmanlike to cry over the loss of a few thousand dollars, Johnny Wilson is again the goat.

Wilson has never been a popular champion, but in this case he is not the whole works in placing the blame for the Labor Day fizzle.

CLASSY FIELD IN BATTLE FOR $30,000 FUTURITY

New York, Sept. 10.—Belmont Park, the most magnificent race course on the North American continent, is the scene of something like $50,000 worth of racing this afternoon.

The Futurity stakes and the Jockey Club Gold Cup, the former for a guaranteed purse of $30,000 and the latter a test at two miles for a purse, to which the association adds $10,000, are the headliners of the program.

The Futurity is the most talked-of event in American racing. It is the oldest of the big turf features carrying consent of the turf features carrying community in the horse-breeding regions of the United States awaits the news of the result of this race with feverish interest.

While in previous year has Belmont's classical two-year-old affair presented a more open spot.

With Morvich and Miss Joy ineligible, there are a dozen or more candidates with seemingly equal chance of carrying off the rich prize.

Harry Payne Whitney's stable apparently has the greatest strength numerically with Whiskaway, Huntsweep, Fair Virginia, Bunting, Broomster to depend on. Next comes the Rancocas establishment with Kai-Sang and Budana, both of which have accomplished much in a racing way to date.

The Lexington stable had the beautifully-bred colt, My Play, a full brother to Man O'War, to depend on, while John E. Madden's color-bearer most likely will be Surf Rider or Dendlock.

Other probable starters are Toll, Firm Friend, Sedge, Lord Baltimore, Yankee Hare Oceanic, Sunwick, Calantman, Rib Grass and Southern Cross.

While the Futurity, naturally, is the real place de resistance, there is a probability that the Jockey Club Gold Cup may furnish the better contest, for it should be the means of bringing together the cream of the two-distance racers with the exception of Willis Sharpe Kilmer's popular old performer, Exterminator, which captured the event last year.

It is in this race that Grey Lag and Touch Me Not may renew their battle of one week ago, and if they do, the result should go a long way towards proving which of this pair has best claim to the three-year-old championship.

Other excellent performers named among the probable starters are Smoke Screen, Sportiboy, Copper Demon, Playfellow, Mad Hatter, Thundercolon, Sporting Blood and John P. Grier.

Under ideal weather and track conditions there's every prospect that the winner of the 1921 renewal of the Jockey Club Gold Cup will enroll his name on the scroll of fame by hanging up a new track record for the two-mile journey.

For the lovers of the steeple chasing branch of the sport, and their number is legion in this neck of the woods, the Belmont Park management is staging the Corinthian Handicap, at about two and a half miles.

TENDLER-FRIEDMAN MAY DRAW $40,000 GATE

Philadelphia, Sept. 10.—Only light training was on the program for Lew Tendler and Bellor Friedman today. Each announced today that he was down to weight for their scheduled eight-round battle at the Phillies Ball Park next Monday night when they clash in a return contest.

Although neither man is guaranteed a big purse, they probably will draw down young fortunes for their services. Tendler and Friedman are getting percentages of the gate for this bout, and their ends are expected to run into five figures. With a crowd of 25,000 expected to be in attendance it is predicted that the gate will pass the $40,000 mark.

INGRAHAM VICTORY OVER AUSTRALIAN SURPRISE IN TENNIS OPENING

By WILLIAM TILDEN, 2D.

Copyright, 1921, by Sol Metzger.

Germantown Cricket Club, Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 10.—The fortieth annual lawn tennis singles championship of the United States opened yesterday on the courts of the Germantown Cricket Club under ideal conditions of weather, courts and gallery. All the playing favorites advanced according to schedule, but the defaults of Ichiya Kumagae, C. S. Garland, R. Lindley Murray and William A. Larned, through illness and injury, robbed the opening day of four of its most popular players.

I have never seen a larger gallery for the first day of play of a national championship. Fully 8,000 spectators filled the great stands around the strip of championship turf. They applauded with keen interest and intelligence, showing the remarkable gain in public popularity that tennis has made in the last few years.

* * *

There was one surprising upset when W. W. Ingraham, the junior star, from Providence, R. I., defeated Norman Peach, captain of the Australian Davis cup team, in straight set contest by 6—2, 6—1, 6—3. Young Ingraham was in magnificent form. He stormed the net at every opportunity and cut off the Antipodean's long drives for placement volleys to the sidelines. It must be said, in justice to Peach, that he was recovering from a slight attack of ptomaine poisoning and was not at his best, but Ingraham's win was well deserved.

* * *

"Little Bill" Johnston, considered by many the favorite for the title, was unexpectedly extended by Hunk Kelleher. Johnston also was slightly indisposed and lacked his customary punch. Kelleher played brilliantly and forced the famous Californian to top speed throughout all three sets, each of which was scored at 6—4.

* * *

J. C. Anderson, the Australian Davis Cup star, dropped the first set to Lawrence B. Rice of Boston, but hitting his stride overwhelmed the American and ran out the next three sets with the loss of only eight games. Anderson looked very good to me today. He has great speed and severity. He is inclined to wildness. He should meet his teammate, Hawkes, in what may well prove one of the crucial matches of the tournament.

* * *

The remaining stars of the tournament, R. N. Williams, 2d, Watson Washburn, Nathaniel F. Johnson, S. H. Vossell, B. Hawkes, N. W. Niles, Walter T. Hayes, Vincent Richards, Zenso Shimidzu, Howard and "Bob" Kinsey, William A. Kreidler, Paul Neer, Alan Allen, F. G. Lowe and myself advanced with ease. Although Richards defeated E. T. Herndon decisively, the Princeton star took the third set during a lapse of concentration on the part of the Yonkers lad.

Marshall Allen displayed brilliant form against John Hennessey, the Indianapolis star, whom he eliminated with the loss of eight games, and will meet Shimidzu tomorrow. Although the Japanese is the favorite, I look to see Allen take at least a set and possibly upset the dope and defeat the Davis cup star.

* * *

Stanley W. Pearson, of Philadelphia, put out J. M. Davies, the California Collegiate player, in sequence sets. In what might have been considered an overturn. Pearson's local record, in which he has scored victories over Bates and Lowy of California, and Wallace Johnson, make me consider the outcome logical.

* * *

A. Wallis Myers, the noted English author and critic, played a bitterly contested five set match with Paul W. Gibbons, president of the Philadelphia and District Lawn Tennis Association. Gibbons led, 7—5 and 6—4, when he defaulted to the Englishman, desiring that the visitor should remain in competition.

* * *

The card for today finds Washburn meeting Wallace Johnson, Shimidzu pitted against Marshall Allen and Walter T. Hayes against Vincent Richards. Willis E. Davis will oppose Clarence V. Todd, of Australia, in the other feature match. I have a hunch that Johnson will defeat Washburn in a very close struggle, although the dope calls for the reverse. Richards should defeat Hayes decisively, as the Western's star looked particularly good in a distinct chance. Davies should overcome Todd with ease.

* * *

The tournament was run with the regularity of clockwork. The layout of the grounds is certainly the equal, if not the superior, of any previous national tournament. The turf of three championship courts is in perfect condition and should stand the wear of the tournament excellently.

The tournament looks to me like a fitting climax "to the great year" in American tennis.

Orange Best Color for Grid Warriors, Says Psychologist

Urbana, Ill., Sept. 10.—Orange is the best color for a football jersey, the psychologist assisting the University of Illinois eleven has decided, and the traditional blue sweater of the Illini will be discarded this Fall.

"In a football game the men on the team are playing against a dirty gray greenish background furnished by the gridiron and the grandstands," Dr. C. G. R. Griffith of the department of psychology advised Coach Zuppke. "It is desirable that a color be chosen to stand out against this background."

Dr. Griffith teaches a course in the university's coaching school dealing with psychology as applied to the needs of athletic coaches.

MORLEY SAYS HE WILL KNOCK OUT SIEGEL

By JACK CONWAY.

Mike Morley, Hartford's entry in the grand old game of swat, says he will knock out Nate Siegel when he meets the welterweight champion in the feature bout of ten rounds at the Armory A. A.'s show at Mechanics Building next Tuesday night.

Morley, a rugged 150-pounder with a punch, has plenty of confidence in himself and strong again and Hartford now wants action. He is out to get a shot at the welterweight title and is talking fight and money. The Brooklyn warrior can fight and has the wherewithal to back up his challenge.

"This is all he declares:

"Will fight Benny Leonard at 147 pounds for $5,000 a side, any number of rounds, or a decision.

"Will fight Jack Britton for the championship at 147 pounds at $15,000 a side, any number of rounds, winner take all.

"Will fight Johnny Wilson at 160 pounds for the championship, any number of rounds, any side stake, any conditions.

"Will fight Harry Grab at 147 pounds, Grab to name side stake and conditions.

"This is a sweeping dcf and Barfield is serious. He has just claims for championship in the welterweight and middleweight kings. He has fought Leonard and won newspaper verdicts over him.

* * *

"He whipped Britton four times, earning the unanimous newspaper verdicts over the champion in Philadelphia, Brooklyn and Buffalo. Britton has always refused to meet Barfield in a decision bout. Britton knows Barfield can whip him.

* * *

* * *

"Barfield is ready. He awaits the champion's answer.

* * *

Mickey Desmond, of Brockton, will collide with Young Palmer, of Waltham, in the semi-final of ten rounds, while Young Tansey, of Cambridge, and Bert Jones, of Revere, will travel the eight-round route.

Dan McKetrick writes as follows: "Soldier Barfield, the bugaboo of champions, is on the trail again.

"The Soldier broke a bone in his arm last boring. It was his left wing, and the famous "back hand"

BRAVES AFTER CLEANUP IN FINAL CLASH WITH PHILS TODAY

The Braves and Phillies wind up their short stay here this afternoon, and, with the Mitchmen going at top speed, again the Quaker City boys are in for another trimming. Fillingim is due to do the twirling against Meadows.

The Braves and the Phillies made a record for the season yesterday. They played the quickest game of the year for this city and undoubtedly for the National League and possibly for the country when they decided their battle in one hour and nine minutes.

Incidentally the Braves also shut out the Quakers, in the sixty-nine minutes of playing.

It was fast baseball and the fans, who were present, were hardly aware that it was so early when it was all over. But the clock in the centre field showed that it was only twenty-four minutes after 4 o'clock. Then there was nothing to do but go out in the sunshine.

Pine pitching by Big John Scott, errorless fielding and timely and opportune batting by the Mitchelmen gave the Braves the edge.

• • •

Scott was in rare form, never exerting himself. In five innings only one man reached first base. That happened in the second when Kopp worked into one of Jack's fast shoots.

• • •

Betts, for Philadelphia, displayed well on the mound, keeping the Braves' hits well scattered. Errors by Parkinson and Konetchy helped spell defeat. It was Betts' hit in the sixth inning to centre that broke up Scott's prospective no-hit, no-run game.

• • •

Powell was the heavy batter for the Braves, hitting three singles in four times to the plate. He was most instrumental in making the two runs.

• • •

With two gone in the first inning, Southworth nicked one of Betts' fast ones for a triple to the score board. In attempting to stretch it into a circuit clout he was an easy victim at the plate, Wilson to King to Peters.

• • •

Boston lost a chance to score in the fourth inning when Powell hit over the infield. Christenbury's single along the right field foul line sent Powell to third. Southworth tapped a feeble one to Betts, who threw him out at first. Cruise hit a long sacrifice at Konetchy, who threw to Peters, who ran Powell down between the baskets. Bescket fled to left infield closing the inning.

• • •

Powell's single to right, in the sixth, blazed the way for the first Boston run. Christenbury walked to Peters. Southworth forced Powell. He reached third when Konetchy allowed Cruise's easy fly to get away. Southworth racing to third. Boeckel proved the man of the hour by hitting safely to right to field scoring Southworth.

• • •

The second run for the locals came across in the seventh inning when Ford started a rally with a single to right. Gibson sacrificed him along. Scott's bang carromed off Betts' glove, but was picked up in time by Monroe, who tossed him out. Ford going to third. Powell connected for his third hit, a clean single to centre, scoring Ford.

• • •

Gibson played an exceptionally fine game behind the bat, receiving a fine recognition from the fans when he caught Peters' foul on the first offering of the Penn twirler. Good fortune was with the big fellow, for in going after the ball he ran across the bats, escaping without injury. On the defence Boeckel played his position in grand style, and did fine scooping hart hit grounders with ease and grace

• • •

Pirates Lead by Only Eye-Lash Over Giants

Pittsburgh leads New York, in the National League race, by a scant eyelash. In fact, unless the percentage is carried out to the fourth figure the race is a tie between the Pirates and the Giants. Yesterday's defeat for the Pirates and the victory achieved by the Giants closed the gap between them.

Now the standing is: Pittsburgh won 80, lost 53, percentage .6060. New York won 83, lost 54, percentage .6054. Ordinarily these figures would be written at .606 for each club.

Resembling in character a world's series in baseball, the classy card arranged for tonight at the Revere cycle track will introduce all the American champions in the most attractive race card ever staged in this country. The races mark the close of the local bicycle season and it is fitting that title holders will be in competition in the grand finale.

The Pilgrim cup race over a fifty-mile course will be among six pace-followers and should be even better than the great cycling Derby of two weeks ago. The riders selected are Reres, Chapman, Wiley, Carman, Verkeyn and Miquel.

Frank Kramer, the American sprint king, will meet two of his old Newark rivals—Orlando Pinti, champion of Italy, and Al Goulett, the Australian—in a series of sprint races. The sprints will be decided by point system, first place counting five points, seconds three and thirds two points

Bobby Walthour, Jr., son of the famous Dixie Flyer of the same name, will show local fans why he is entitled to wear the American amateur sprint crown when he will meet Leo Maggoli and Johnny Gallo in a series of sprint races. Walthour is a whirlwind finisher.

BASEBALL NEEDS EVERS BACK IN GAME

Fighting Trojan Silent as Sphinx on His Release by the Cubs

Johnny Evers, a ball player, manager and man who is needed in baseball, has been arbitrarily canned by the Chicago Cubs. The case is rather a puzzling one.

Evers, being canned, simply went home and refused to say a word as to why he was shipped and how his attitude seems here to be what he is best of the gamest and best of sportsmen.

Evers took a mess of cheese this Spring and refused to make pate de foie gras out of it.

Making a silk purse out of a sow's ear would be child's play to who could have taken the team that was given to Evers and made it a winner.

Yet Evers put the old fire and fight into that bunch and kept the team right on the heels of the leaders for weeks.

The inevitable slump followed, because the team had neither the defensive nor the attacking power to win when the other teams got down to business.

For the first two months of the season, Evers was something of a hero. His players were strong for him, and they declared it was his spirit that inspired the club.

Then the pitching went wrong, the defense slumped and the team started to lose ball games.

It slumped back to somewhere near forty. It dropped there, and the result was that the fans were dissatisfied and sore and the owners reflected the spirit of the fans.

Then Evers asked why he was let out he is reported to have said that it was because he was "riding" the players. He was guilty. He had been riding the players and perhaps without either whip or spur.

But also he had been riding those same players during the early months of the season, when they were winning. He had been driving them without let-up. He had been driving them.

Now there is a funny thing about this situation. They gave throwbacks for Evers when he was winning and pounded him on his unjust opinion of a majority of newspaper experts at the ringside. One newspaperman gave Burman a shade. Burman weighed 114½, and Smith entered the ring at 120 pounds.

FRED YELLE BEATEN BY TOMMY FLANAGAN

New Bedford, Sept. 10.—After staying out of the ring for more than two years Freddie Yelle of Taunton a former New England lightweight champion, was defeated last night by Tommy Flanagan of this city.

Two other bouts, however, were more fortunate than Yelle. Young Jimmy Wild scored a knockout over Young Enos of this city in the second round, and Young Sullivan was given the decision at the end of a six-round preliminary fight with Young Savash of New Bedford.

NORTON'S ALL STARS PLAY AT PORTLAND

Joe Norton's All Stars Journeyed to Portland today to play the Portland team, coached by Fred Catergren. This is the first out-of State trip made by the South Boston team and the result of today's game is the first in a six-game series scheduled for the Pine Tree State.

Says the Big Theatrical Stars Don't Know What Their Favorite Soap Is Until They Read the Magazine Advertisement

There are a lot of famous people in the world, but nobody can become really great until they have had their pictures and testimonials published in tooth paste and soap advertise ments.

One big star said one liked a certain kind of soap so well that she could hardly wait for Saturday night to come

She doesn't receive any money for this, but she gets all the soap she wants.

An average cake of soap costs ten cents, and she uses one bar a month, so that is a saving of a dollar and twenty cents a year.

A person who isn't fortunate enough to become famous has to buy his own soap.

One celebrity bawled her maid out for buying her some poor soap, and the maid said "That's funny. I read in a magazine yesterday that that was your favorite soap."

The pictures always show the theatrical stars in a smile in one hand and a cake of soap in the other.

One actor gave a testimonial to a shoe concern which read: "Your rubber heels are wonderful; without them I wouldn't be able to sneak in the house at 3 a. m."

They had another letter from a tetrachoroma artist which said she always wore a pair of their shoes in her barefoot dance.

If you are famous you don't only get rubber heels and soap, but you get tooth paste and hair nets.

If you're a blonde they also give you a brunette hair net in case you should change your mind.

If they use your photograph and testimonial in their advertisement the company makes you take a tube of their pasta whether you have any teeth or not.

One company told a star that her teeth looked like pearls. She got sore because she thought they meant she looked like an oyster

It made her so mad that she would only consent to having a hundred photographs taken.

It's getting so that stars and other famous people have to read the magazines to find out what their favorite things are

THREE WILL TRY LIGHT SWIM ON SUNDAY

Toth, Richards and Twohig Will Attempt the Tough Feat Tomorrow

The piece de resistance of a waning natatorial season will be staged Sunday when Sam Richards, Charlie Toth and Ex-Representative James Twohig will attempt to swim to historic Boston Light.

Toth and Richards, great rivals, set out together for a light seven weeks ago. Toth accomplished the feat in remarkable time, but Richards was taken from the water, when a squall swamped Sam's attendants at Long Island.

Richards and his supporters believe that he can beat Toth, and are there going out to prove it to the sporting public Sunday. Toth replies he has swam to the light once and can do it again, as well as beat any time Richards may make.

Twohig, two weeks ago, was taken from the water when but two miles from the light. He challenged both at the time, but it went unanswered

The men will dive off Charlestown Bridge at 7 a. m. Sunday. Richards and Toth will be handled by members of the L street Swimming Club, and Twohig by his manager, D. F. Mahoney, and E. B O'Neil

LIEBOLD'S TIMELY SINGLE SCORES THREE FOR RED SOX VICTORY

Washington, Sept. 10.—Little Nemo Liebold came through with a beautiful single over second in the fifth inning of yesterday's game between the Red Sox and Griffmen, and as there were three men on bases, the crack put the game on ice as Sam Rice allowed the ball to go through his legs, and three men registered at the home plate. Almost a similar condition existed in the fourth with the Griffmen having three on, but the timely crack was missing, and only one run resulted

With the series on the season standing, 9 to 7, in favor of the Senators, the Red Sox crept up close today, when they won handily, 5 to 1. Sam Jones has always been a terror to the Griffs and although he was hit harder than usual today, the veteran kept the bingles so well scattered as to almost nullify their effect.

• • •

George Mogridge went like a whirlwind for four rounds, but the Duffyites got to him in the fifth with four singles and when the final out was made, four runs had scored.

• • •

That was all the lead Jones needed to work, and he simply breezed through the final five innings.

• • •

In the big inning, Scott and Rue singled in succession, and Jones laid down a bunt. Scott beat Mogridge's throw to third, filling all bases. Liebold then singled to center. Rice came dashing in to head off Rue! at the plate, but the pellet went through Sam's legs, and when it was finally recovered Nemo was perched on second and all three men had scored ahead of him. Foster followed with a clean single to right, and Liebold also scored.

In the seventh round, Liebold walked and Foster brought him all the way home on a fine double-bagger along the left field foul line.

• • •

Washington's only score developed in the fourth when Rice crossed the plate with Judge down on Harris' single to right.

The fielding of Foster and his batting, with Liebold's, shared honors with Sam Jones' fine pitching

Joe Bush will probably pitch the final game the Sox have here today, and will have Walter Johnson as his opponent.

• • •

With four more games to be played, the Red Sox right now think that the Red Sox will end the season with a lead over the Griffmen.

• • •

Erickson and Acosta worked in the last two innings, as result of introducing pinch hitters. Foster getting a double off the former and latter settled the Sox down in order. The pinch hitters were useless, as Brower filed to Leibold and Smith rolled to Peckinpaugh.

• • •

Hild-brand helped the Red Sox somewhat in their eighth-more fifth round, when Picnich caught him napping with a snap throw to Shanks but the umpire couldn't see it that way, although a big kick was registered by the local men.

Harris robbed Leibold of a hit in the first inning, when he grabbed Nemo's grass cutter over near second, and threw the runner out while almost standing on his head.

In the fourth, Mike Menosky caught hold of one of Mogridge's benders, and drove it to right centre for what appeared a certain triple or homer, but Dan Rice galloped over and pulled down the ball a few feet from the scoring board.

Although little interest was attached to the game, at least 8,500 spectators passed through the turnstiles

White Sox and the Tigers Have Real Slugging Bee

Baseball fans have been talking of slugging bees and batting feats for many, many years, but the fans in Detroit yesterday realized fully what the expression mean. The White Sox and the Tigers knocked the old horse hide to all parts and corners of the field, making so many hits for so many times that the score seems like one of the old days.

RICKARD'S ASSOCIATE AND BACKER SUES HIM

New York, Sept. 10.—Tex Rickard refused today at a referee's hearing to give answers to any one of the ten questions on the ground that it might tend to degrade or incriminate him.

The questions concerned his connection as a lessee with Madison Square Garden and the promotion of the Dempsey-Carpentier fight. The hearing was preliminary to the trial of the suit for an accounting brought by Rickard's former financial backer and associate, Hayes Grant, who claims that Rickard double-crossed him in obtaining a five-year lease on Madison Square Garden and that the profits of that lease were diverted to promoting the Dempsey-Carpentier fight.

Some of the questions were as follows:

"Does John Ringling get a salary as an officer of either one of these corporations?"

"Does he get a salary as an officer of each of these corporations?"

"Did you ever receive any money from either of these corporations?"

"Did Ringling receive any money from either of these corporations?"

"Did you take any of the moneys of either of the corporations to finance or conduct the Dempsey-Carpentier fight?"

Late in the afternoon, just before the hearing was adjourned for the day, the last question was again put to Rickard in the following form:

"Do you still refuse, on the ground that the answer might degrade and incriminate you, to state whether or not you took any of the profits of the Madison Square Garden Corporation or the Madison Square Sporting Club, Inc., to promote the Dempsey-Carpentier fight?"

Rickard was permitted to reply by his attorneys, they held a whispered conference for several minutes and then interposed various objections, all of which were overruled by Referee Hull.

Rickard, in a scarcely audible voice, then answered

"Yes, I might."

When Armstrong brought suit against Rickard last April, Rickard made a general denial of the allegations that they had agreed to lease Madison Square Garden and operate on a partnership basis, and that Rickard had obtained the original draft of the lease from Armstrong's office by misrepresentation.

Today Rickard admitted that they had agreed to a partnership in the operation of the garden provided Armstrong met certain conditions with regard to the financing of the project. He also admitted that the lease he negotiated, after taking John Ringling into partnership in the enterprise, was virtually the same as the draft that had been in Armstrong's possession. The only difference he could recall was that in the final draft the owners of the garden, the New York Life Insurance Company, had reserved twenty seats.

Armstrong, who is represented by Thomas J. O'Neil, contends he is entitled to half the net profits of the operation of the garden since the lease went into effect, said to total between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000, and half the net profits of the Dempsey-Carpentier fight, which are said to be at least $300,000.

It is stated in the complaint that Armstrong was associated with Rickard in the promotion of the Dempsey-Carpentier match, the South American land, cattle, packing and refrigerating enterprise, the Willard-Moran boxing match and the Rickard Texas Oil Co., Inc."

NORWICH HAS ONLY TWO REGULAR LINE MEN

Northfield, Sept. 10.—The prospects of a good team at Norwich University this season in football are excellent, in fact of the fact that almost of a new line must be developed, five of the seven men having completed their courses last Spring. The two men left are Walker of Marlboro and Harrington of Boston.

Coach Foster has some good material for the line and will be assisted by Merrell, the 1920 Dartmouth man and Carpenter, a former lineman of the institution. Powell and Gardner, Archer of Boston, Barrett, a former captain; Smith of Gardner, Hills of Bellows Falls, and Tufts of Rutland are candidates for guards. Mahoney of Boston and Flanders of Lancaster, N. H., graduates of St. Albans will compete with Walker for tackles.

There are three candidates for quarterback: Griffin of Stoneham, Bradley of Boston, and Whetton of Needham; while Dewitt of Stoneham, will be tried at end instead of fullback, where he played last year.

Other candidates for ends are Curtis of Pawtucket, Merchant of St. Albans, and Douglass, another Massachusetts man

Battiston of Rutland, and Tyler of Brookline will try for centre. Jim Laird, the Colgate star of two years ago, will probably be in the fullback, and Sparrow of Mattapoisett and Captain Smith of Montpelier, at halfback positions, although Bemis of Waltham, Ashton of St. Albans, and Densmore of Montpelier will also try for these positions.

Smith and Laird are excellent punters while Bradley showed up well last year. Edwards of Malden, last year's centre who was injured in coaching the freshmen team.

The team will open its season against Dartmouth at Hanover, N H, September 24. The other games are: Maine, October 1; Rensselaer, October 8; Middlebury, October 15; Tufts October 22; Clarkson, October 29; Vermont, November 5; Boston University, November 12.

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. FORBES.

Edward L. Doheny, Walter C. Teagle and other oil leaders who conferred with President Obregon, have returned, delighted with the outcome of their visit. Mexico, apparently, at last feels it is time she got on friendly terms with the United States and resumed old time relations. Not a few heads of American enterprises are busy gathering information concerning the prospects for selling goods to our southern neighbors. The outlook is thought very bright, and encouraging developments should shortly come to the surface. Who knows but what the resumption of active business dealings with Mexico will prove effective in hastening the revival of industry here?

They didn't believe in coddling in the old days. A Texas banking reader recalls the following incident:

When "Al" Smith, now president of the New York Central, was a youngish man, his superior officer on the Lake Shore road asked his superior officer that a new equipment issued Smith for use on his long night trips. Back came this reply: "Hire a young man. Don't put him on the wood box. That is where I used to sleep when I was young. It will make him sick and tough, as it did. To this day A. H. Smith wouldn't be afraid to put on the gloves and meet any man on the whole system.

Will Andrew W. Mellon be able to stay long at Washington as Secretary of the Treasury? The political environment there is not in harmony with his temperament or his life-long experience. Mr. Mellon has been a giant in the banking world for many years. He has long been accustomed to having things largely his own way. Like his bosom friend, H. C. Frick, he became more accustomed to dictating than to dickering.

At Washington he finds that dictation is impossible and that dickering and compromise are the rule. Decisions cannot always be based strictly on sound business judgment. This, that and the next political consideration must be taken also according to certain step might be good business but bad politics. And as a member of the Republican administration Mr. Mellon must needs take cognizance of political considerations and become a team player.

FOOLS ENCOURAGED.

The persistent strength is encouraging different speculators to buy stocks and form pools. The easier credit situation is causing a change in the views of bankers as to the desirability to lend money for speculative purposes. Banking institutions will not have a financial panic on their hands if they are not so critical as to just what uses borrowed funds are put at this time.

An indication of what may be expected of the forthcoming autumn trade now that earnings are on the upward trend, was witnessed by the case of the New York Central, the profits of which ordered the payment of back dividends. The common stock of "Nickel Plate," attention to which has often been directed in this column, advanced sharply following the official announcement.

The advance in cotton means much to the farmers, which had a good Kansas City Southern. Expansion in the oil industry has also helped swell its earnings. Perhaps the return of foreign credits on grain should also help business in its territory.

More Land Exported

Exportations of land last month was the largest for such a period this year and stocks at Chicago decreased about 84,000,000 pounds during August. The increased foreign demand was on the continent of Europe, for which requirements being considerably less. Receipts of cotton increased about 17 per cent. over receipts for the corresponding 1920 month.

Bank Clearings Decrease

Dun's weekly compilation of bank clearings shows an aggregate $4,580,674, a decrease of 12.7 per cent. from last year. Outside of New York there was a decrease of 22.6 per cent. from a year ago.

only a house. But this old place is a real home."

A prominent man from the South dropped in to see me yesterday. He made a remark which, unfortunately, a great many men visiting New York are prompted, by their experience to make. There, in effect, was what he said:

"My, but your bankers here do take themselves seriously. The dignity they throw around themselves is really laughable. Maybe it impressed me because with a sense of their tremendous importance, but to those of us who are accustomed to meeting quite important men in all parts of the country, their airs give us a pain. I was also impressed with the way they adopted when they began to talk about business conditions and the old Pollyanna paintings in his Fifth avenue home. This is one of the most artistic homes in New York city. Yet it has an atmosphere of homelikeness lacking in so many of the homes of the newly rich. The following incident, however, will give a side-light on Mr. Speyer's democratic make-up:

* * *

I was visiting his old-fashioned country home near Scarborough, on the Hudson, not long after he built his wonderful Fifth avenue mansion. As we were strolling through the grounds I noticed that quite a few of the giant old trees were carefully patched. I made a remark on the matter. Mr. Speyer replied: "Do you know, although I like my city house all right, somehow it doesn't appeal to me like this old place here. In New York one can't feel a sense of possession; here I look upon every tree as an old and intimate friend. I have tended them and nursed them during their illness, so to speak, for many years. Stocks Close Strong in Active Market; Marks Sell for Less Than a Cent

ANOTHER BOOST IS FELT IN WALL STREET

Reactionists Defeated by Upward Push to Copper Shares as Leader

By BRODAN WALL.

(Registered, U. S. Patent Office.)

New York, Sept. 10.—More of the doubt entertained by many concerning the genuineness of the present upward movement in the stock market was removed Friday.

Coming at a time when so many doubting Thomases were preaching that the rally had exhausted itself and that only those stocks in which there had been a large short interest moved, Friday's rise was most convincing evidence of many friends for the constructive side. The fact that almost all of the maximum advances were maintained up to the close was impressive.

ACTIVITY IN COPPER.

For a short time after the opening it looked as though the "reactionists" would have their way but before the end of the first hour the copper shares were taken in hand by an operator who is past master in the art of manipulation. Activity in that group was followed by increased dealings in the equipment shares which responded quickly to the strength in Baldwin Locomotive and American Locomotive.

Subsequently, first one group and then another became the center of activity, the tobacco shares being the feature in the late dealings with a sharp upward movement in tobacco products which touched a new high price for this movement. The close was strong and around the best prices, leading to expectations of a continuation of the movement during the short session tomorrow.

Strength in cotton and grains continues the underlying factor on the present rise. Realization is growing that the sharp enhancement in the mineral market prices of those commodities insures the release of many millions of dollars which have been tied up in frozen credits all over the world by good business but bad politics. And as a member of the Republican administration Mr. Mellon must needs take cognizance of political considerations and become a team player.

* * *

You cannot teach an old dog new tricks. Well he knows it, greatly do Mr. Mellon's credit if he can adapt himself to the new atmosphere he finds himself in. Perhaps he will subordinate so much that is uncongenial and distasteful to him for the sake of accomplishing vitally important things for the benefit of the nation. At a time like this it is infinitely valuable to have a financial giant like Mr. Mellon at the financial helm in Washington. Later on, perhaps, he will feel that he can retire with good grace.

* * *

Quite a hubbub was raised in Wall Street by the giving out of a prepared interview by Jesse Livermore, often spoken of as the great daring bear, operator of the present day. The "Boy Plunger," as he used to be called, has had a marvelous following, according to report, made and lost millions. Wall Street has been full of stories for years past of Livermore's sensational killings on the bear side, and the voluntary statisticians figured out his profits at dazzling sums.

"What's the game?" is the question now on the tip of many Wall Street tongues. The shrewd wonders whether this speculator is sincere in predicting a rising market. Many are suspicious that some efforts are made to get a line on what he is now doing, whether he is buying or selling, and which stocks he is operating in.

Wall Street says that Livermore places his daring deeds through a whole string of brokerage houses. Wall Street also says that on one occasion a certain broker in New stock exchange house came to Livermore's assistance in a time of need, and that he has never forgotten this kindness, with the result that the lion's share of his trading now passes through this firm.

Livermore is regarded by Wall Street as the most picturesque speculator that has appeared on the stage since James R. Keans was at the height of his spectacular career.

* * *

James Speyer is one of the most popular of our financial leaders. His heart is as large as his purse. Probably no big man in the banking world has fewer enemies. Although the Speyer family have been among the rich for generations, "Jimmie" is the personification of democracy. His democratic nature takes the form of living out of line with his standing in the financial world, but is rather a matter of innate personality.

Many read with keen regret that fire has destroyed some of the fine old Colonial oil paintings in his Fifth avenue home. This is one of the most artistic homes in New York city. Yet it has an atmosphere of homelikeness lacking in so many of the homes of the newly rich. The following incident, however, will give a side-light on Mr. Speyer's democratic make-up:

SPILLANE FINDS BETTER TIMES ON FARM

Agricultural Fairs in Middle West Not So Attractive to Prosperous Growers

By RICHARD SPILLANE.

On the Road, Sept. 10.—What fairs in the Middle West are not what they used t obe. Formerly they gave to the agriculturist his great Autumn blowout with a train journey, if he lived a considerable distance from the city near which the fair was held, and a visit to the city itself with its sights. Now it is changed. The farmer journeys to the fair in his automobile and has a tent or family camp near the fair grounds. If they want to go to town they step on the gas and go there.

Bright lights, movie shows and such are no treat to the farmer today. Every rural town of any size has a movie and the people on the farm know Doug Fairbanks, W. S. Hart, Mary Pickford et al, as well as the city folk. The farmer used to be interested in the fair, because he used to be tied down to the farm, but since he came to know the auto the fair has lost its charm. The merchants of State fair cities say they do not get a two-half the patronage out of the gatherings now they did in the old days.

HIS OWN MEDICINE.

A St. Paul banker was talking about the calling of loans. "I got the shock of my life some time ago," said he. "I had borrowed some money from the Continental and Commercial of Chicago and along about midnight one day I had to pull. I got aboard a train and went to Chicago. I had to go on some other business anyway.

"This is pretty rough,' I said. 'I'm sending out notices like this to the people who owe my banks, but I didn't know how it hurt until I got one myself from you. Now, I've been doing business with you since 1881 and I think you ought to make an exception in my case, even if the Federal Reserve objects to renewals.'

"The departmental head thought I was serious and sent for the president and say the notice had gone to me inadvertently.

"I received the obligation twenty-five per cent., not that it was necessary, because I had to pull. But I got just the same the receipt of that peremptory call to pay that note made me appreciate how little many of persons to whom I had sent like demands must have felt when they got the like document on my bank. It made me appreciate the other man's situation."

CAN LEARN FROM WEST.

Eastern railroads might learn something from Western lines. Probably the finest stretch of road bed in America is that of the Rock Island, a western between Chicago and Milwaukee. The chair cars of the Northwestern are as superior to those on Eastern railroads as those on Eastern railroads are superior to the day coach.

Middle Western cities are much cleaner than Eastern. The railroad, board and traffic is better regulated. Even at that the Easterner has to pull for what he gets.

The ideal stretch of roadway for the speed maniac is the Lake Shore boulevard in Chicago at night. Traffic cops apparently never object, however fast you go. But woe to you if you proceed at leisurely or what you consider a reasonable speed. Then you may be mulled to account for blocking traffic.

DRESS FOR COMFORT.

The Venetian garden by the river ride is quite an attractive place now in Milwaukee. Into it the other night, while the place was pretty well filled, entered six young men bronzed and sturdy looking. Two tables were put together and they sat down to dinner. But before they seated themselves they removed their coats and vests.

They were farm boys from up Wisconsin who were attending the Dairy Fair at the grounds about ten miles out from the city.

They didn't mind the people in evening dress, and the people in evening dress didn't mind them parading.

Possibly those who were garbed according to the mode felt a bit envious, for it was a frightfully hot night.

Perhaps the impress of the Ferguonauts is stamped on Minnesota. The names of Duluth, Hallock, Minneapolis, Radisson, Nicollet and such are prominent in most of the cities. As for lakes there perhaps is not another section of America with so many. There are thousands of them and some of them are great. It is from these lakes that the Mississippi and many other important streams much of the volume that makes that mighty river deserving of the name of "Father of Waters."

WALL ST. GOSSIP

By MONITOR

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Another spurt of activity and strength characterized the stock market Friday, and the upward movement covered a broad range of issues, with gains extending from one to five points. Oils, coppers, equipments, steels, rails and textile shares all participated in a brisk upward movement. The skepticism again ascribed the showing to short covering, thus indicating that a strong bear party is standing its ground.

* * *

IT IS hardly necessary to single out individual issues. The rally warranted to something of a sensation by the episode in Nickel Plate, where stockholders were made happy by reason of the dividend. The incident while unusual, was productive of cheer. The coppers reflected encouragement over the maintenance of the Utah dividend, as well as the moderate rise in lead prices. The figures of the American Iron and Steel Institute on steel ingot production disclose a somewhat better condition in the industry than was believed to exist. Moreover, the reports of retail merchants in the Northwest and steel industry tend to sustain certain claims that production has been on a low basis now that the depletion of stocks is becoming a factor.

* * *

THE pronounced strength of equipment is due, probably, to the persistent belief that the railroad car buying of equipments has been one of the most pronounced features of the market lately, and the big short interest in Baldwin has been on the run for the last two days.

* * *

THE market shows a disposition, to overlook, or run a blindfold, to the unfavorable news such as the moderate decline of 0.9 per cent. in the reserve ratio of the combined Federal Reserve system, and the passing of the dividend on Central Leather.

* * *

FOR the first time since 1918 all of the dividends accrued on both issues of preferred of the New York, Chicago & St. Louis railroad are paid in full. The directors authorized payments of 5 per cent. each on the first and second preferred out of 1918 income, 2¼ per cent. on the second preferred out of 1919 income, and 2½ per cent. on the common out of income for the same year. The common will be actively traded in for the first time in some weeks and showed an advance of five points at the close.

* * *

A FACTOR in the strength of the market was the smelter stocks was the announcement of an advance in the price of lead from 6.50 cents to 7.50 cents.

* * *

THE steel stocks advanced on the figures issued by the American Iron and Steel Institute, which showed an increase of steel ingot productions from 803,376 tons in July to 1,138,171 in August. This increase was largely taken by gains in indicate a permanent change in the steel situation.

* * *

SOME disappointment was expressed over the annual statement of the American Sumatra Tobacco Co., was made public. Earnings after watch the dividend, all charges and preferred dividends were equal to $5.74 per share on the common stock. Earlier reports had indicated that $10 per share would be shown.

* * *

LACK of demand is reported in the sugar trade as responsible for the recent decline in the price of refined sugar. The Federal Sugar Refining Co. announced a reduction from 5.75 to 5.60 cents. Most of the other refiners cut to 5.65 cents.

* * *

CONTRARY to the usual custom, directors of the Chandler Motor Co. met this city instead of in Cleveland. The regular quarterly dividend of $1½ per share was declared, and in a statement issued after the meeting it was said that the company for the January quarter will declare a dividend of $1½ per share, payable the last quarter. The company is said to be shipping about 400 cars monthly.

* * *

THE expected occurred when direc- tors of the Continental Can Company met and passed the quarterly dividend of $1.75 per share due on the common stock at this time. The regular disbursement of $1.75 on the preferred was authorized. The stock is off a point on the announcement, but advanced three points in the afternoon trading.

* * *

SIXTY-FIVE cases of silver bars ar- rived here from Germany, the value being placed at about $32,000. A shipment of about $300,000 in gold arrived from Sweden, and the Aquitania brought $4,600,000 consigned to Kuhn, Loeb & Company.

* * *

THE equipment stocks were strong under the leadership of Baldwin Locomotive which advanced sharply on the announcement that the government of Chile had placed an order for ten Mikado type locomotive gauge locomotives. American Locomotive and American Car & Foundry were active and strong.

* * *

IN ADDITION to the steel ingot pro- duction figures, a number of optimistic items in the steel world were noted. The Pressed Steel Car & Coal Company, a subsidiary of the Iron Products Company at Holt, Ala., announces the re-opening of that plant after nearly a year of idleness. The Valley Mould & Iron Company at Sharon, Pa., has reopened on a 50 per cent. capacity basis. The Farrel Works of the American Sheet & Tin Plate Company has started ten hot mills. The American Steel & Wire Company has increased production of its nail department. These various increases in production will result in the employment of more than two thousand men, who have been idle from two to six months.

* * *

CABLE advices from London advise that the Japanese government has bought in that market 2,739,100 pounds of the first series 4½ per cent. sterling loan, and 8,513,140 pounds of the second issue. The bonds have been taken up and cancelled.

* * *

ANNOUNCEMENT was made of a re- duction of prices by the Moon Motor Car Company of $200 per car, following the example of the Studebaker corporation.

* * *

DIRECTORS of the Manhattan Shirt Company declared their regular quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent. on the preferred stock. The Lehigh Valley Coal Sales Company declared the regular quarterly dividend of $2 per share on the stock of that company.

Rubber, Kelly Springfield, Endicott Johnson, Texas Co., Studebaker, Mexican Petroleum and Utah Copper.

INDUSTRIALS IN DEMAND.

TWO NEW HATS IN RING FOR MAYORALTY

Sullivan and O'Connor Latest to Enter Race to Succeed Peters

Two more hats have been thrown into the Boston mayoralty ring—those of former Corporation Counsel John A. Sullivan and School Committeeman Charles S. O'Connor.

The Charles S. O'Connor volunteer campaign committee was organized at a meeting of the school committeeman's friends from every ward in the city at Young's Hotel. Judge Joseph J. Murley of East Boston presided, the campaign was launched, plans outlined to perfect an organization and promises made of the candidate's formal announcement next week.

Sullivan, on the other hand, is said not to take his own candidacy seriously but to be using it to hinder the friends of John R. Murphy from getting him to throw his hat into the ring and from getting him the Good Government indorsement.

Mr. Sullivan has a deep-seated dislike for Mr. Murphy. It grew out of the dramatic events in the close of the Curley administration when Mr. Murphy as chairman of the Finance Commission, was hurling hot-shot day after day into Mr. Curley's record, shot which blew open and revealed conditions that blasted Curley's political career.

Sullivan made tax boast he could save the city a million dollars a year. He was corporation counsel at the time and Mr. Curley was Mayor. They began this campaign to save a million by discharging the young ladies who played the piano for the authentic exercises by the children in the kindergartens.

Sullivan then was the highest paid employe of the city and the Finance Commission thereafter began the investigations which showed that the economy wave never reached the department chiefs and other administration favorites. Their salaries, as a matter of fact, were being increased substantially.

Bogus Legion Agents Abroad, Warns Spillane

Department Adjutant Leo A. Sullivan of the American Legion has warned the public that bogus solicitors for disabled veterans and the Legion are at work in this city and on the street cars between Lowell and Swampscott.

Adjutant Sullivan said a report had been received that men in uniform were soliciting advertising for the "Legion Review," claiming that the American Legion Weekly had suspended and the Review taken its place.

Legion officers denied any knowledge of the Review and stated that the Weekly has not suspended publication and is the only authorized paper of the veterans.

COTTON MILLS IN FALL RIVER SHOW GAINS

Sales of Print Cloth Increase and Mill Stock Market Takes Brace

Fall River, Sept. 10.—A decided improvement has been noticed in the local cotton mills for the last week, and at present a large number of them have abandoned the curtailment program which has been in force since last Spring.

According to reports, the sales of print cloth have been more than encouraging this week, notwithstanding the fact that the week has been rather a sensational one, due to the fluctuation in the cotton market.

Many of the mills have reopened their departments which had been closed for many weeks, and this has greatly reduced the number of unemployed in this city. The mill stock market has also taken a decided brace within the past few days and prices have advanced rapidly on nearly all stocks.

Brokers report a great difficulty in securing stock to sell, and the question is one of finding stock to offer instead of selling. As an example it may be stated that stock in the Mechanics Mills has advanced from $20 a share to $180, and King Philip Mill stock has jumped from $10 to $140 a share.

BERLIN INVADED BY CAPITALISTS OF INDIA

German Commercial World Is Stirred by Coming of Wealthy Men From East

Berlin, Sept. 10.—A veritable invasion of Germany by Indian notables has set in, following the path of Sir Rabindranath Tagore, the Bengal poet and philosopher, twenty of India's most notable princes have come to Germany. Ten of these are among India's richest men. They are not only of princely rank, but are the native Rockefellers and Morgans, and their invasion is said to be a commercial one.

The With government is so occupied with internal politics, party feuds and Social Democratic demands, that it is not paying the slightest official attention to the exotic Croesuses, but their coming has stirred the German commercial world.

The word has gone out that they have come to place vast orders for manufactured articles, especially machinery. Hitherto all those orders have gone to England.

The Indians are very intense and far reaching Nationalist boycotting movement against Great Britain, India's Boycotting and Morgans, I am informed, are here with the view of having German industries become the workshop for India's needs.

Old Timers on 31st Annual "Wheel About the Hub" Due Back Tonight

The five members of the Boston Bicycle Club, who spent the night in the Mansfield Tavern, Mansfield, as a stopover point in their thirty-first annual "wheel about the Hub," spent a quiet evening taking the kinks out of their tousled grouped about the logs of the tavern, recalling memories of the days when the "bicycle craze" had brought about the inauguration of the club.

England Probably Ready to Give Up More

The headlines of the newspapers give the impression that Mr. Lloyd George, the British Prime Minister, has made "sweeping concessions" to Mr. De Valera, the President of the Irish Republic, in the invitation to continue the negotiations at a place in Scotland.

We do not see the concessions, although we do freely and gladly admit that the invitation to continue the negotiations after the first British offer has been rejected indicates a disposition on the part of the British government to retract from its earlier declaration that it was not trading, but had laid all its cards upon the table and offered its maximum of concessions.

The inevitable interpretation of this latest invitation from Mr. Lloyd George to the representatives of the Irish government is that the British are prepared to make further concessions. Whether they are prepared to make concessions of moment or not does not appear from Mr. Lloyd George's invitation.

It must not, however, be concluded that "sweeping concessions" are involved in the invitation to discuss everything except independence. The representatives of the two nations have already crossed swords on that very point, Mr. Lloyd George seeking to deposit Mr. De Valera in a cavity some weeks ago by asking Mr. De Valera if he would refuse to discuss peace unless independence was made one of the bases of discussion. Mr. De Valera replied by asking Mr. Lloyd George if he would refuse to discuss peace if independence were made one of the bases of discussion.

As one of the great British journals has pointed out, Lloyd George has never offered, as he claims to offer, the dominion status to Ireland. Among other things not conceded to Ireland, but which is an essential element of the dominion status, is the right to withdraw from the so-called "Commonwealth Group," a new name for the British imperial system, by which, we fear, the British dominions are being drawn into a common association with Great Britain in the imperialistic exploitation of alien and helpless races like India.

However, it is Ireland's business if she chooses to join this "Commonwealth Group," but she will not join upon a basis of equality with the other members of this new alias for the British Empire, if she does not have the right to withdraw from it whenever she pleases.

Nevertheless, so long as there is a scintilla of hope of settling the Irish question peaceably, we hope and trust Mr. De Valera will accept Mr. Lloyd George's invitation, and in the meantime we hope that the friends of Ireland in America will remember Mr. De Valera's appeal not to weaken his hand by premature manifestations or an eagerness to seize on the appearance of justice and generosity from Great Britain, but in every instance to suspend judgment till the representatives of Ireland themselves have examined and acted upon the British offers of settlement.

Tunnels For Banks

There'll Be More. Other Things

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

Chicago's big banks will build tunnels, underground passages connecting them with the Federal Reserve Bank. The idea is to keep bandits from holding up their messengers on the streets. Tunneling has never been perfected or fully utilized except by moles and earth worms.

The English Duke of Portland spent $15,000,000 building passageways and a riding school underground on his great estate, because he did not want people to see his face.

The French and the English for years postponed building a tunnel under the Channel. England wanted to remain an island and didn't trust France. If she HAD trusted France she would have saved many men, ships and millions in the recent war.

By and by when power costs nothing and is easily transported there will be tunnels under the oceans for heavy freight. Chicago's underground tunnel system, built to fight teamsters' strikes and built inadequately, will be rebuilt properly in many cities before long.

Once more the New York & New Haven Railroad runs a whole month without killing an employe. Very creditable to the safety first campaign and to safety devices. If it were thought REALLY worthwhile, thousands of workmen's lives could be saved by the same care every year—and if government would spend a few dollars, in response to President Harding's urging, it could save the lives of 20,000 out of 25,000 mothers that die annually in childbirth.

Nature and Providence are patient. A man recently died, almost eighty years old, and all that he had done was run a big whiskey saloon for profit, and a big racing stable for amusement. The saloon prospered, his horses won, he died rich and peaceful.

The whiskey that he sold was bad enough, the gambling that his racing stable encouraged was worse. But Providence allowed him to run along for ten years beyond the threescore and ten.

Providence, that could enforce prohibition so easily, by a mere act of the will, prefers to let human beings work out their problems for themselves. How do you explain that?

A League of Nations, "for settling all international questions and avoiding war," usually turns out to be something else. It is a league to enable a few powerful nations to make weak nations do what the powerful want. Or it is a league that nations drop as soon as anything is suggested interfering with their plans.

The Argentine Republic found many good reasons for leaving the latest League of Nations, almost as soon as it was born. Now Chile, third of the great South American A. B. C.—Argentine, Brazil, Chile—prepares to abandon the league if it presumes to meddle in Chile's fight with Bolivia. Nitrate fields and a seaport, etc., are more important than leagues. Men only gave up fighting and went to court when they had to. It will be the same with nations.

Kings are out of date—and long have been, though they did not know it. England keeps her King, as a convenience, and from sentiment, as nice old Boston ladies stick to gaiters for shoes of shiny, soft leather, with elastic on the sides.

Business is the real thing, the real world manager, and now rules openly. You read that Stiness, most powerful business man in Germany, has gone to Sweden, to arrange trade with Russia, or has he had a meeting with J. P. Morgan? And you know that those names, Stiness for Germany, and Morgan or Rockefeller for America, represent the modern governing power. They represent also an improvement on the old things, although not perfect.

CHINA A MENACE TO WORLD PEACE

Guglielmo Ferrero Shows Danger of Far Eastern Situation Becoming Critical Unless Agreement Is Reached at Washington.

The famous Italian historian in a most lucid article herewith makes clear in what ways and to what extent the Disarmament Conference at Washington will affect the future of China. The world scramble for control of the unlimited resources of the Chinese Empire is seen as a menace unless the powers agree at Washington.

By GUGLIELMO FERRERO.
Written Especially for Universal Service.

PARIS, Sept. 9.—An alliance between two States is always entered upon as a precaution against an enemy, present or future, real or presumed. Everybody knows who was the presumed enemy of England and Japan when they became allies—it was Russia. The British Empire concluded an alliance across the oceans with the Yellow Empire, and helped its development to the utmost of its power that Japan might act as a check and barrier to the greatness and expansion of the Muscovite Empire in the Far East.

The Muscovite Empire has collapsed. The only power which can now wield a preponderating influence in the Far East is precisely Japan.

What then would be the object of the new Anglo-Japanese alliance, supposing it were renewed, seeing that its original scope has ceased to exist?

We can only see one aim in common between the two countries: the conquest of China. Or, to use a blander and perhaps more exact phrase: the preponderance of the two allied powers in Chinese affairs above all other powers—Asiatic, European or American.

China's Needs for Defence

China is probably destined to develop into a great world-travail and danger before long. The same tragedy which was enacted in Italy at the end of the seventeenth and the first half of the eighteenth century is being repeated in China, but in gigantic proportions. A civilization much more ancient, mature and wise than the western civilization, is no longer able, despite its wisdom, to withstand the weapons and modern devices of the barbarians who menace it from the North and the East.

In order to defend herself, China, too, stands in need of artillery, of steam engines, of railways and coal, and in order to obtain them she is forced to "westernize" herself, dropping overboard a good deal of her millennial wisdom.

During this crisis of transition, which began with the fall of the dynasty, China will be exposed to the most conflicting influences from Europe and America, to their doctrines, their capital and their trade.

She will be a sort of novice and pupil of "western civilization, disputed and harassed by numerous masters anxious to teach her European and American progress and to sell her the most costly products of this progress, and who, the better to impress their teachings, will be instantly tempted to make a free use of the stick and the whip on the shoulders of their dull and recalcitrant pupil.

Japan Most Dangerous

Here lies the chief danger. For although China is driven westward by the necessity to increase her military efficiency, she still is, and will continue to remain for many years, extremely weak. Those who know the insatiable greed and rapacity of the Western powers may easily imagine the temptations capable of arising from this disproportion of forces between the powerful teachers and the feeble pupil.

About twenty years ago it was the fashion in all the European chancelleries, political circles and serious—or reputedly serious—papers to talk of slicing up the Celestial Empire as if it were a cake. These rapacious desires were later turned in other directions, but they might crop up again, stimulated by the very weakness of China, in this savage unleashing of passions and greed which is devastating the world.

Owing to its geographical position, its ethnical, historical and linguistic affinities and the power of which it disposes, Japan will be the principal and most dangerous of these would-be tutors. But it cannot remain alone and unchallenged, for it will have to face the competition of the leading European powers and of the United States, which have already secured important interests in China.

Until she becomes sufficiently strong to shift for herself China is and will remain an open field for the struggle between the political and commercial rivalries of Western civilization and the invading ambition of Japan.

The struggle for China, already latent during the ten years which preceded the World War, will now burst openly and fiercely. But in this struggle, after Russia's collapse, an Anglo-Japanese alliance might easily achieve an overwhelming preponderance, both as regards China and in respect of the other European and American States.

This is another result—nor the least important—of the World War. If England, at the end of the nineteenth century, encouraged Japan's development in order to counter-balance Russia's advance, Russia, on the other hand, up till 1914, counter-balanced Great Britain and Japan in the Far East. Now this equilibrium has ceased to exist. The preponderance of the Anglo-Japanese alliance has not yet become manifest for various reasons.

England is still suffering from the effects of the World War, and is too deeply engaged elsewhere to launch on a dangerous adventure in China. Japan seems almost to have lost its bearings, owing to the outbreak of so many unexpected and revolutionary events, and appears uncertain as to which course to steer among so many wrecks and menaces. And it must be held in mind that the alliance which is about to expire had been concluded with entirely different ends in view.

But if the alliance be renewed, it will be very difficult for the contracting parties to resist the temptation of their overwhelming superiority, from which situation it is easy to predict that a violent competition in naval armaments will take place in the Pacific, giving rise, sooner or later, to a big war.

How can this hideous calamity be averted?

The conference which President Harding has called to meet at Washington may achieve much, if it finds a right opening.

The general idea seems to be excellent. Instead of attempting, as President Wilson, to build up a universal entente between all the powers of the world, President Harding proposes to thresh out the leading political problems separately, in order to ascertain whether it is possible for the Powers more closely concerned with each problem to arrive at a friendly understanding.

For instance, it appears that he intends to submit the Pacific problem and the problems of Continental Europe for discussion separately by the representatives of the powers directly interested therein.

I believe this is a better and more practical plan than the idea of a universal entente, as it will be easier to find the solution of each problem by circumscribing it.

In fact, thus isolated and considered by itself, even the problem of the Far East appears capable of solution. It will no longer be necessary to alter the course of history or to reconstruct the world from its foundations according to a new philosophical plan.

Powers Must Agree.

It will suffice if the powers concerned will agree at the Washington conference to certain well-defined and precise terms and principles, the practical application of which requires only common sense, moderation and foresight.

I think that the principles necessary to maintain peace in the Far East without too many sacrifices might be roughly outlined as follows:

2—Independence and territorial integrity of China.

3—Limitation of armaments.

These three fundamental principles are indissolubly linked one to the other, and are not active and efficacious unless working together. Without the two first the reduction of armaments would be impossible. But it would be of little use to proclaim the independence and integrity of China if the powers continued in their policy of shameless greed.

WHY RAPID MOTION HEATS AIR

By Garrett P. Serviss.
Eminent Astronomer and Authority on Subjects of Scientific Interest.

"We were discussing yesterday the reason for the air becoming cooler when riding or fanning. By explaining this you will oblige several constant readers.—P. F. H., Perth Amboy, N. J."

THE air is not cooled by motion; on the contrary, it is heated. Sir William Thompson (afterward Lord Kelvin) found out by experiment that the mercury in a thermometer placed in front of a body moving through the air rose one degree Fahrenheit when the velocity was 125 feet per second, and that thereafter the increase of temperature was proportional to the square of the velocity— i.e., if the velocity was doubled the increase of temperature was quadrupled, and so on.

According to this, if you drive your fan or your automobile at a speed of about 85 miles an hour you will heat the air one degree. While at 850 miles an hour the rise of temperature would be 100 degrees, and at 8,500 miles an hour you and your machine would burst into flame like a meteor, the rise of temperature at that velocity amounting to 10,000 degrees!

Due to Evaporation

Nevertheless, our sensations tell us that there is a cooling effect when the air in contact with our bodies is stirred, or when we move swiftly through the air. This effect is due to the increase of evaporation from the surface of the skin when the air flows rapidly over it, thus continually bringing fresh air to absorb the humidity.

Evaporation—i. e., the turning of liquid moisture into vapor—is a process that absorbs heat from the immediate surroundings, thus lowering their temperature. So, when the evaporization of the perspiration collected on the surface of the skin is hastened by the current of air passing over it heat is drawn from the skin and the latter is proportionally cooled.

The reason why the changing of the liquid drops of perspiration, which are usually exceedingly minute, into invisible vapor, absorbs heat from the surroundings, is because the formation of vapor involves expansion, the molecules of moisture being driven farther apart as their physical state changes from the liquid to the vaporous.

To produce this expansion molecular energy, or heat energy, is needed, and this is drawn from the surroundings. The heat thus absorbed is changed in form, while maintaining the vaporous expansion, and is called the "latent heat of vaporization." But if the vapor is recondensed into liquid, the latent heat returns to its original form and is given back, as heat, to the surroundings.

Human Body An Engine

It may seem to you that the cooling effect should be counteracted by the heating of the air by motion, spoken of in the beginning. That would be the result if the motion were sufficiently rapid, but you will remember that a velocity of 125 feet per second is required to produce a single degree of increase in the temperature at the point of contact between the moving body and the air, and 125 feet per second is equivalent to eighty-five miles per hour.

The arrangements made in the body to take advantage of the cooling effect of the vaporization of moisture gathered on the skin must excite our admiration. The human body is a kind of heat engine whose temperature is maintained by the oxidation of food materials, and to maintain the temperature internally at an almost unchanging point—a little under 100 degrees—a wonderful system of pipes and conduits is furnished.

Through such pipes the blood distributes the heat over all parts of the body, and the outer system of small blood vessels are controlled by a system of nerves, the vaso-motor nerves, which automatically regulate the quantity of blood, and with it the temperature, at different points in the body, in accordance with local and temporary needs.

In addition, in order to provide for the case of too great heat affecting the entire body, there is a system of vessels in the skin called the sweat-glands, which are most intimately associated with the outer system of small blood vessels, or capillaries, from which they absorb water, and this water is conducted to the surface of the skin in the form of perspiration. Arrived there, it serves, as we have seen, to reduce the temperature of the body by its evaporation.

WHAT YOU ARE THE PROBLEM OF TODAY

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

IT is not meant as a personal affront to you if Man is called a caged animal.

Curious, how some people even dislike the suggestion of the possibility of their being descended—or ascended—from a lower order of animal being.

Almost as though you implied thereby that they were beasts; but, as for the rest of us, we are at least fallen angels!

Not even Darwin taught that the human species were monkeys; but only that we, through countless ages, were evolved from a collateral branch related to the apes.

Why worry about all that? Surely, it is no such loss of human dignity to acknowledge a lowly biological origin (which, incidentally, relates you to the rest of nature), as it is to allow others now to make a monkey of you, or to permit yourself to live an aping, imitative life.

After all, pride of ancestry is not nearly so important, individually and socially, as responsibility to posterity.

Speculations about the mythological past of the human race need not particularly concern you. But what You as an individual, are contributing towards the future of mankind, by what you are now—that is your personal problem.

A Caged Animal

Be all that as it may, it certainly should be safe to say—at least figuratively—that man is a caged animal.

Which merely means: that, as what we call civilization proceeds, we human beings move farther and farther away from Nature. And we pay the penalty in physical deterioration, because we live in captivity, as it were.

We lose our hair and our teeth and our digestion. We become increasingly spectacled, our hearing is less acute, and our sense of smell is practically gone.

The Natural Man appears to be disappearing. And in his place is coming a bespectacled, dyspeptic bundle of nerves!

No one will say that we are proud of this artificial product of the ages that is losing the physical stamina which belongs to Man, be he fallen angel or ascended ape.

Man's first function must always remain to be a healthy, lusty animal!

And we may as well face the fact that, as human life grows more intense and we herd more than ever in the cities, we shall have to learn how to preserve and improve our bodily health.

As time goes on, we shall need even more vitality to live as masterfully as befits our human nature. The exceptions only prove the rule: that accomplishment of any kind demands our keeping the body at its best.

Caged Beasts

If you have watched the wild beasts in captivity at the zoo or in the circus, you have noted their restless running to and fro (they move vigorously as the space is limited) and their endless stretching and yawning.

In part, at least, they are exercising in order to maintain their strength, as compensation for the loss of natural freedom, and movement.

That is a lesson man needs also to learn, if we are to continue (as is likely) to live a life as unnatural as that of the caged animal.

We must somehow make up for the loss of exercise wherewith the artificial life of our big cities has penalized us. Herein the country folks have an incalculable advantage.

It is next to impossible to cheat Mother Nature. She exacts a price for human progress. Man has paid for all his gains.

We have built up brain at the cost of brawn. We must beware lest we lose our bodies and become mere thought machines!

It is well that we seek restoration in vacations, and that we run to parks and seashore whenever we have a brief respite from our work.

Those are wise, too, who are trying to regain the use of their legs, instead of succumbing to the lazy loafing of the automobile.

By whatever means, we must see to it that we keep our bodies fit, so that they shall serve us for the making of our living and the making of our life.

It spells real success to be a good, healthy animal, and thus a better and a more efficient Man.
